

Carter energy plan pinches all

WASHINGTON (UPI) — From hints and trial balloons, testimony and tactics, the outlines of President Carter's energy legislation can be seen fairly clearly three weeks before he sends it to Congress.

Carter has said his program will pinch everyone a little, and it may put a dent in his popularity.

White House energy chief James Schlesinger calls it "the moral equivalent of war," and effort requiring united national effort.

SOURCES in the Capital and energy agencies say the program will include:

- Gasoline. An increase in the federal tax to get people to use less. Carter spokesmen deny he was considering a one-shot increase of 25 cents per gallon, but sources say he may propose 5-cent increases for each of five years, with at least some of the money going to states for energy conservation programs.

- Automobiles. A surcharge on cars that get low gas mileage, perhaps adding up to $500 to the sticker price of the worst gas-guzzlers. Some argue the idea would let the rich choose any car and force the poor into a limited choice.

- Natural gas. An easing of federal price controls on newly discovered natural gas, with some extension of federal controls to gas produced and sold within the same state. Another possibility is a selective pricing system that discourages wasteful use of gas. Carter also is considering a prohibition against use of natural gas where other fuels can be used, such as for industrial and utility steam boilers.

- Oil. Pricing policy about as it is now, with controlled prices that can increase substantially each year and with an end to controls in 1979.

- Coal. A goal of almost doubling production to about one billion tons a year by 1985, coupled with an easier system for forcing utilities and industries to switch from oil and gas to coal. There is authority in present law for required conversions, but they go slowly and that power expires June 30. Carter also may recommend easing clean-air restrictions on use of coal.

- Atomic power. Carter calls nuclear power the lowest priority energy item, but he probably will try to speed up slightly the construction of conventional atomic power plants with improved safeguards. It is believed he

Many factors influence voters in making choice

by BILL HILL

Cannon. Clabour. Fitzpatrick. Mennecke. Swanson. Ryan. Cawley. Graham. Palmatier. Perkins. Johnson. Barboro. Gollberg.

Arlington Heights voters Tuesday will face the task of sifting through those names to pick five — either Cannon or Ryan for village president and four of the others for village trustee.

Since the positions the 13 village board candidates take on issues are bound to be confusing, many voters are likely to cast their votes on the basis of their "gut feelings" about them.

THOSE FEELINGS, political scientists say, may be based on just about anything.

In most elections, voters "on the fence" can sidestep their indecisiveness by voting for the candidates from their favorite political party. That won't work in Arlington Heights' so-called nonpartisan elections.

Arlington Heights voters will be forced to choose between the five members of the Village Independent Coalition party and eight others who just call themselves "independents."

So what's left? Ethnic heritage or religious preference can be important, or sex, or age, or even plain old "good-looks."

THOSE CRITERIA are important to a lot of voters, say political scientists who have studied voting behavior.

They certainly help to narrow the field.

For example, Kathryn Graham is the only woman running and Leonard Perkins is the youngest candidate at 30.

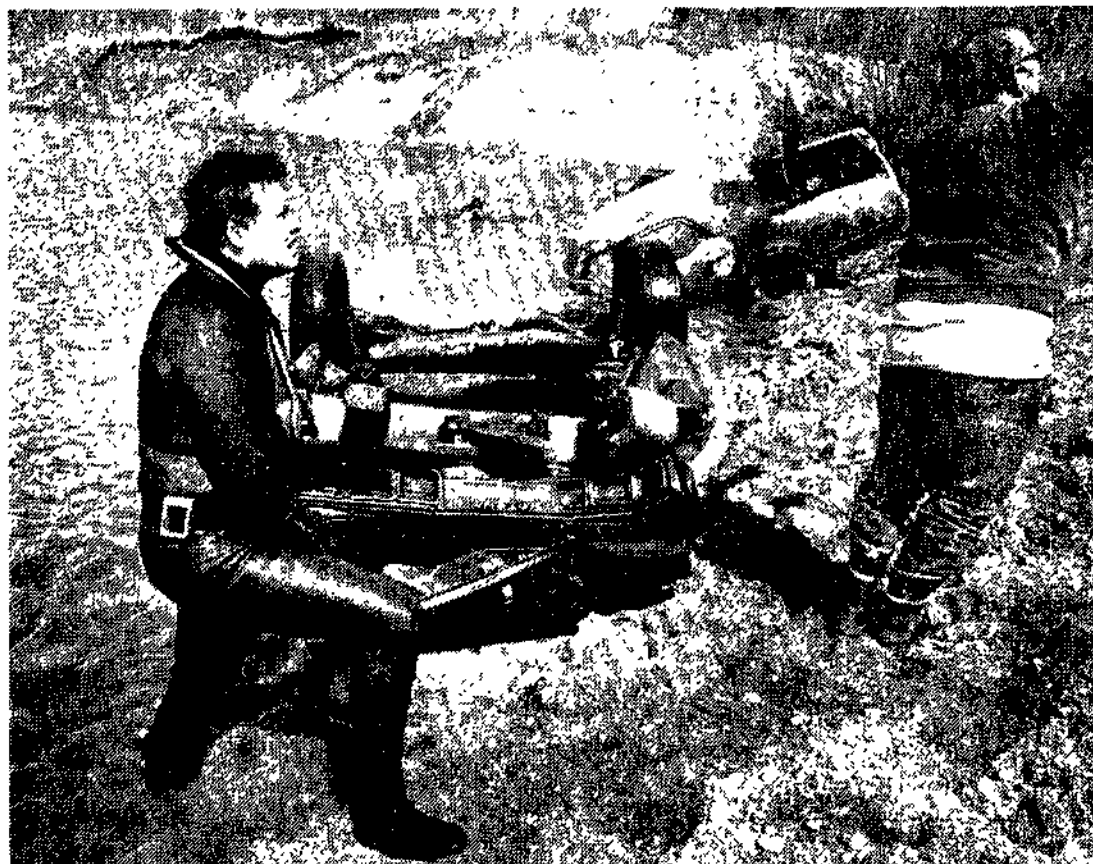

Ethnic background? James Ryan and John Fitzpatrick obviously are Irish and Art Gollberg goes nowhere without a "Swedish Power" button on his lapel.

As for religion, the VIC slate has been described by some as the "St. Peter's party," possibly since two of its candidates, Doug Cannon and Wilbur Mennecke, are members of St. Peter's Lutheran Church where VIC nominating petitions were first circulated. Add to that Charles Swanson, a past president of Cross and Crown Lutheran Church.

SUCH THINGS can be important inside polling booths, especially in nonpartisan elections like Arlington Heights', says Don Bowen, a political science professor at the University of Illinois, Chicago Circle campus. But often more important are two other variables: Ballot position and name recognition, studies have shown, Bowen said.

He is fond of a story about a primary election a few years ago in Wichita, Kan. in which voters faced a list of 21 candidates for a single office.

Skindivers bring up a graveyard of junked cars — but not the body of missing Barbara Glueckert.

New hunt for teen fruitless

Scuba divers from nine area fire departments, about 65 Army Reserve units and investigators from Mount Prospect searched a number of rock quarries located southeast of Elgin Saturday in a massive but futile effort to find the body of missing Mount Prospect teen-ager Barbara Glueckert.

Related story on Page 7

Several cars were towed out of the water and trunks were forced open as investigators followed a hunch that her body possibly had been dumped in the quarry area. Army reserves of the 12th Special Forces, a Green Beret unit in Arlington Heights, searched the land for possible burial sites around the quarries, owned by the Chicago Gravel Co. The all-day search did not result in recovery of the girl's body, which police believe may be buried somewhere near Huntley, Ill.

Preparing for the plunge.

Divers surface in their futile search.

Car repairs found costly, varied

Car owners who need auto body repair service face a costly, essentially unregulated industry whose pricing practices can vary by hundreds of dollars for the same work, a Herald study has found.

From dealer-run body shops to independent operations, the costs of labor and parts can vary vastly from shop to shop despite the fact that all use the same manufacturer's pricing and labor time guidelines to make their estimates.

The Herald found a difference of nearly $200 in the estimates quoted to repair a typical "fender-bender" — dented left front fender.

auto dealerships. Based on their estimates, the study found that:

- The cost to repair the car ranged from $227.92 quoted by one independent body shop to $414.07 quoted by another independent shop, even though all the shops estimated the same amount of time to complete the work.

- Labor costs ranged from $61.20 estimated by an independent shop to $150 by one Chevrolet dealership.

- Parts costs varied from $114.21 quoted by two firms to as high as $229 quoted by two other firms.

- Both the lowest and highest estimates came from independent body shops, while the variation in dealer-quoted estimates varied by more than $100, from $267.27 to $379.62.

- None of the 13 estimates was the same, although two estimates were $2 apart.

- Ten of the 13 shops that receive discounts on parts passed part of the discount along to the customer.

The car had a dented fender, broken headlight frame and a small scratch on the front bumper. It had been damaged while parked on a street, and repairs were to be paid by an insurance company.

All the shops asked what insurance company was involved, presumably because Allstate and State Farm insurance companies use their own adjusters to estimate damage costs.

ALL USED A book that lists General Motors parts costs and the suggested labor repair time to prepare their estimates. The shops listed essentially the same parts needed for the repair, although the two lowest estimates eliminated a costly new bumper from the charges.

The bumper had a two-inch scratch, but the majority of the shops said the customer would be justified in in-

THIS DAMAGE will cost from $227 to $414 to repair, depending on which Northwest suburban auto body shop you select. The $200 range in prices among 13 estimates reflected varying labor and parts cost — and the recommendation of some repair shops to replace the car's bumper.

Monoson trial to start today

Gilbert J. Monoson, former Wheeling trustee, will stand trial today on charges of bribery and official misconduct. Monoson will appear before Judge Warren Wolfson of the Cook County Circuit Court at 9 a.m. at the Richard J. Daley Center, Chicago. Monoson, who ran for office in 1975 on a reform ticket, was indicted July 29 by a Cook County Grand Jury on three counts of bribery, one count of attempted bribery and four counts of official misconduct. The charges stem from Monoson's alleged offer to use his influence on the village board to obtain a zoning variation for George Carpin, president of GEC Industries, 422 Mercantile Ct., in exchange for a $10,000 "no collateral loan." Carpin's factory did not meet village building codes. Monoson, who has resigned from the village board since the indictment, has pleaded innocent to the charges. He faces a maximum prison term of three years and a $10,000 fine if convicted.

Columbo trial delay expected

A motion to delay until June the trial of Patricia Columbo is expected to be filed today in Cook County Circuit Court by her attorneys. Miss Columbo, 20, and Frank DeLuca, 39, are charged with the May 4, 1976 slayings of Miss Columbo's Elk Grove Village family. The trial is scheduled to begin today. The motion to delay the trial comes after published reports that DeLuca, while awaiting trial for the murders, offered money to a cellmate in exchange for the murder of two prosecution witnesses.

Two men arrested for drug sale

Four persons — two of them from Arlington Heights — were arrested during the weekend and $40,000 in marijuana was confiscated in the climax of a combined investigation by police in Buffalo Grove and Arlington Heights. The two Arlington Heights men, both 18, were arrested Saturday afternoon after they sold five pounds of marijuana to an undercover police agent. The names of the men were not released pending further investigation into area drug traffic. Charges against the pair also were not released. Later that day, Buffalo Grove and Arlington Heights police traveled to west suburban Bensenville where they arrested two men with the aid of police in that village and recovered 44 pounds of marijuana valued at $40,000. Jose Hernandez, 28, and Telesford Cantv. 24, both of Bensenville were arrested. Both were being held Sunday by Bensenville police pending a bond hearing.

IRS says no to bras, baths and bunnies

by United Press International
A Pittsburgh woman told the IRS she wore white bras and white slips solely because she's a nurse, so how about an income tax deduction for this "job-related" expense?
A man in Detroit wanted to write off his haircuts, saying he got them only because he's a Marine Corps recruiter.
No deal, replied the Internal Revenue Service. Lingerie and haircuts are "normal expenses."

THE NURSE AND the Marine fared no worse than scores of other taxpayers making unusual queries to IRS counselors this income tax season. But many uncommon questions brought positive responses.
The woman in Los Angeles whose false teeth fell into a toilet and got flushed away can't claim them as a casualty loss, the IRS said, but she can list her new chompers as a medical deduction.

And, yes, the worm dealer in Georgia whose merchandise died in a freeze can claim a business loss.
And this year, for the first time, cosmetic surgery is deductible. An IRS adviser in Pittsburgh passed that information on to a woman who will deduct the cost of having her breasts enlarged.
BUT A PROSTITUTE in Washington didn't do as well. Since she labored while posing as a stenographer, she wanted to claim depreciation on her typewriter. If you don't use it, IRS replied, you can't depreciate it.

An undertaker in Seattle wanted to claim an investment credit on furnishing items — a credit that generally applies to hotels, restaurants and other businesses catering to transients. The IRS rejected his argument that he, too, catered to "a transient population."

A woman in Portsmouth, N.H., wanted to subtract taxes because her rabbits were multiplying so rapidly they filled their outdoor cages and had to be brought indoors. The IRS told her she couldn't claim depreciation on the part of her house taken over by the bunnies.
A Detroit man reported bathing every day to combat a skin ailment. Bath water, IRS advised him, remains a "normal expense."

ANOTHER DETROIT resident said his wife's halitosis was so bad that she went through a quart of milk of magnesia and a bottle of mouthwash a day.
"If she didn't use it," he said, "you couldn't be in the same room with her."
That's quite a problem, but his IRS counselor ruled the cost of making her breath tolerable was not deductible.

POPE PAUL, seated in the gestatorial chair, holds an olive branch as he is carried through St. Peter's Basilica during Palm Sunday rites. The pontiff celebrated mass and blessed the faithful and tourists after the ceremony commemorating Christ's entry into Jerusalem.

Palm Sunday rites begin Holy Week

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope Paul VI distributed olive branches to mark Palm Sunday and told 50,000 pilgrims in St. Peter's Square the "rumblings of war" are paralyzing progress towards world peace.
In his noon address from the papal apartment overlooking the square, the 79-year-old white-robed pontiff told the brightly dressed crowd under a blue sky: "Episodes, symptoms and rumblings of war still rise up today in the life of the world and paralyze progress towards peaceful coexistence, arousing hate and greed and causing terrible harm to a precarious peace."
Earlier he celebrated a Palm Sunday Mass in St. Peter's Basilica before a congregation of 30,000. Opening Easter week with the traditional commemoration of Christ's entry into Jerusalem, the red-robed Pope blessed 21 olive branches and distributed them to 21 Cardinals before the ceremonies.

DIPLOMATS FROM around the world accredited to the Holy See were present at the ceremony.
The coming Holy Week, the most solemn of the year in the Roman Catholic church, will have a heavy schedule for the Pope, who has just recovered from a bout of influenza.

On Holy Thursday he concelebrates a Mass at St. John Lateran Church, washing the feet of 12 men to recall Christ's washing the feet of his 12 apostles at the Last Supper. On Good Friday, honoring the memory of Christ's passion and death on the cross, he presides over a service in St. Peter's and carries a wooden cross on a procession near the Colosseum.

The pontiff appeared in good health at the Palm Sunday ceremonies.
During the Mass he was carried through the congregation in his gestatorial chair distributing blessings, thus putting no strain on his legs which are affected with arthritis, a disease similar to arthritis.

SEVEN THOUSAND youths of the Catholic Action movement from dioceses all over Italy followed the Pope in the procession to the altar, waving palm and olive branches.

LINDA PASTRYK was one of 54 persons confirmed by the Rev. John R. Sternberg Sunday at services at St. Peter Lutheran Church, 208 E. Schaumburg Rd., Schaumburg. First communion rites follow Thursday.

Gas, car taxes to be offset: official

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Any higher gasoline prices or taxes on big cars proposed by President Carter will be offset by other economic measures to preserve the "real standard of living" for Americans, energy adviser James Schlesinger said Sunday.

President Carter's energy program, to be submitted to Congress April 20, "will be tough," Schlesinger said. "But in a sense it will not force a change in our lifestyles."
"We will go on living in suburban communities for the most part and driving automobiles. But there will be well insulated homes . . . and the automobiles will be fuel efficient."

Schlesinger was interviewed on ABC-TV's "Issues and Answers."

HE SAID a big tax on gas-guzzling cars "certainly is under consideration" and other energy conservation measures being planned now will be "uncomfortable to the consumers and somewhat uncomfortable to producers."

Schlesinger said a "mix of measures" is on the drawing boards, but "the main point is to challenge the American people with regard to the very high use of gasoline."

Although energy would cost more, he said, "What we intend to do is preserve the real standard of living of individuals and particularly of the lower income groups."

Americans "will face higher prices in some areas, but they all will be offset by lower prices or lower taxes" in other areas, although "not necessarily in the energy sector," Schlesinger said. Asked if he were talking about a tax rebate or special tax credits, he replied, "That sort of thing."

Predicting congressional passage of the yet-unveiled Carter plan, Schlesinger said the United States is running out of oil and natural gas and, "unless we begin to conserve now, we will run flat out of it in 20 or 25 years."

THE AUTO industry, he said, has to meet an emerging public demand for more fuel-efficient cars or it "faces a future in which there will be no gasoline supplies and no market for automobiles at all."

In Detroit, meanwhile, it was reported that more than half the 4.6 million 1977-model cars sold since last October probably would have been hit with the "gas guzzler" tax under consideration by Carter.

Even so-called economy cars that can top the mandatory 18 miles per gallon average on next year's models if equipped with six-cylinder engines often can't meet that goal. Customers are opting for larger, fuel-consuming V-8 engines.

Mid-sized and larger cars accounted for 56 per cent of 1977-model sales, and 74 per cent of the 1977 models went out the dealer's door equipped with V-8 engines, according to the trade publication Ward's Automotive Reports.

Danger seen in military power loss

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The United States soon could be in a position where superior Soviet military power might force it — not the Russians — to back off in confrontations such as the 1962 Cuban missile crisis, a study group warned Sunday.

"One could conceive of another war in the Middle East in which the USSR, having acquired local conventional superiority and over-all nuclear superiority, could compel the United States to withdraw its influence from that area," the nonpartisan Committee on the Present Danger said.

In a report on Soviet strategy and intentions, the group concluded that unless a recent trend of decreasing U.S. military spending and rising Russian military expenditures is reversed, "the USSR will within several years achieve strategic superiority over the United States."

The committee includes former government officials, academics and business leaders. Among 17 members who drafted the report were one-time will shift from development of nuclear reactors, including the "breeder," that burn or produce plutonium, which also is used in bombs, to some other approach avoiding plutonium. In the meantime, conventional reactors will be used increasingly: 300 to 500 are expected to be in operation in 25 years.

ments for better insulation. One idea is to require public utilities to install better insulation, with the cost to be spread among all home heating bills. Other possibilities are tax incentives for home improvements.

Soviets hit U.S. arms 'whitewash'

MOSCOW (UPI)—The Soviet Union accused President Carter and Sec. of State Cyrus Vance Sunday of "unseemly attempts to whitewash" the U.S. position at last week's abortive arms talks.

The charge, leveled by the Communist party newspaper Pravda, was the latest in a campaign to put the Carter administration in a bad light following Moscow's rejection of two Carter arms limitation proposals after three days of talks.

"It is striking that hardly had the negotiations ended, when President J. analysis called in to participate in the government's National Intelligence Estimate late last year. Their group reportedly was instrumental in the estimate's conclusion that Russia may be seeking nuclear superiority rather than equality.

Carter and Sec. of State Cyrus Vance made statements distorting the real state of affairs," Mai Podkuchnikov wrote in Pravda's weekly international review.

The newspaper said Carter and Vance said the United States proposed "nearly complete disarmament" and "distorted" Soviet Leader Leonid Brezhnev's statements at the talks.

"These are unseemly attempts to whitewash the United States stand of departure from the previous accords, to show white as black and vice versa," Pravda said.

Farrah poster on tap is sure to turn you on

• Dan Konezyk, an Arlington Heights resident who's a partner in the Elmhurst based Tongue in Chic Co., has a new "Farrah" poster. The "Farrah Faucet" poster "will put a gleaming smile on your face," he says. It's a picture of a faucet and will be sold in area stores for $2. His other tongue-in-cheek products include the original digital calculator with a memory — a small board with five numbered holes, one for each finger. Cute, huh?

• Princess Grace of Monaco will make her professional comeback to films as narrator of a feature-length documentary, "The Children of Theater Street," which will have its American preview at the New York City Center May 9. The film was made last year in Leningrad by an American production team.

• LeVar Bordley of Philadelphia, born with his heart outside his chest cavity, was reported in stable condition Sunday with his fragile body trying to stave off infections while recovering from a rare operation to correct the deformity. A surgical team at Children's Hospital performed the surgery on the 5-day-old boy Thursday. Only one other child, Christopher Wall, who underwent a similar operation at Children's Hospital 19 months ago, has survived the rare heart ailment. Christopher is still at the hospital using an artificial respirator to breathe. Fewer than 200 cases of ectopia cordis have been reported since it was first described in 1871.

• Jim Nabors, TV's Gomer Pyle, has just purchased a home on Hawaii's famous Diamond Head. Nabors expects to settle there permanently and film his new television series.

• Spelling a word right lost the Leavenworth, Kan., spelling bee for Debbie Mayberry, 14. Almost two weeks ago Debbie was one of three remaining competitors in the contest when she spelled "resuscitator" correctly — and the word was judged wrong. What actually was wrong was the judges' master list. On that list "resuscitator" was spelled without the letter "c" after the second "s." Challenges must be issued at the time of the ruling, not later, so another girl won the contest. Sorry, Debbie.

Friends mourn two crash victims in silent prayer

For a full minute there was complete silence at the Roselle United Methodist Church — a sad silence. Prayers were offered silently by the friends and family of Charles A. Ziebell and his wife, E. Fern, two victims of the world's worst aviation disaster in the Canary Islands. Memorial services were held Sunday for the former Chicago couple at the church, 206 S. Rush St., Roselle, where an estimated 70 persons paid their respects to the family. The Ziebells, parents of Charles H. Ziebell of Schaumburg, were departing on a four-week Mediterranean vacation March 27 when their plane, a Pan American jet, was struck by a Dutch KLM plane on the runway at Santa Cruz de Tenerife, killing 577 persons. Their bodies have yet to be identified. THE REV. Kenneth Crandall told the congregation that it seemed "a bit incongruous for us to be thinking of gloom" on Palm Sunday, "the most joyous day of the Christian year." "But look what happens in life. The joys of Palm Sunday were dashed within a week when Jesus was taunted, tortured and killed. Those moods can't be separated in life." Crandall asked that everyone remember "the times of joy in Mr. and Mrs. Ziebell's life." "We share with the family the anguish, separation and shock," he said. Charles H. Ziebell, 41, 1925 Weathersfield Way, Schaumburg, a disabled veteran with multiple sclerosis held a reception for friends and relatives at his home following the memorial service. THE BODIES OF 326 American victims of the crash were taken Sunday by two Pan American jets to Dover Air Force Base, Del., where they will undergo identification processing. It is not known if the Ziebells' bodies were among them. The Dover mortuary, used extensively during the Viet Nam War for receiving bodies of military personnel, began preparing for the arrival of the American dead last Friday. A spokesman for Pan American Airlines said experts "will be using fingerprints to identify many of the bodies" using various public agencies including the FBI and the National Safety Board. He described Dover's mortuary as "the best facility in this country for the identification of bodies" but added that some of the crash victims were so badly burned their names may never be known. As the first two caskets were carried by Pan American personnel to awaiting hearses, three ministers bowed their heads and prayed for the victims.

East-West Tollway work begins today

Starting today, construction work will begin on the East-West Tollway between the Eisenhower Expressway and Naperville Road. The project is expected to be completed by Nov. 1. Work will include widening the existing pavement from four to six lanes, installation of a concrete median barrier and rehabilitation of existing pavement. During construction two lanes of traffic will be closed in each direction, and there will be limited detouring onto the right-hand shoulder. Speed limits will be 45 miles per hour.

Louisiana claimed for France

A 36-year-old Elgin French teacher waded to the shore of a choppy Mississippi River in New Orleans Saturday to unsheathe his saber, claim Louisiana for the King of France and bring French-American history and culture alive for his students. Reid Lewis and 22 high school students, adult history buffs and a Franciscan priest, retraced the route taken 295 years ago by Rene Robert Cavalier Sieur de La Salle, the first European to explore the Mississippi River. They came ashore at Audubon Park in six canoes, replicas of the birch bark vessels which carried the original canoes.

Lewis, wearing a wide brimmed black hat to shade his sun bronzed face, unrolled a parchment scroll and — with his fellow travelers in authentic dress around him — said "in the name of the mighty Louis . . . I have taken possession of this country of Louisiana, its seas and harbors, ports . . . and people." He was welcomed by Mayor Moon Landrieu, young boys and a girl waving a white and gold Fleur de Lis flag of royal France.

The LaSalle II explorers started their journey eight months ago in Montreal and after a few days rest in New Orleans, will complete the trip at the mouth of the Mississippi where Lewis will proclaim all the land from the Rockies to the Alleghenies for France.

Joliet firemen ask mediator

A federal mediator was asked Sunday to join talks aimed at ending a three-day strike by Joliet firemen. A union spokesman said talks which resumed at 9:45 a.m. Sunday were adjourned until a federal mediator could attend negotiations between union and city representatives. A news blackout continued regarding the substance of the talks so far. "I have no comment," City Manager Lynn Neuhart said in answer to all questions about city services.

A total of 123 fire department officers and men went on strike Friday to press their demands for a 10 per cent pay hike. The City Council has offered 7 per cent. The first talks aimed at ending the strike were held Saturday and continued on until 12:45 a.m. Sunday. The news blackout was maintained in order "to reinforce and ensure the sincerity of negotiations," said Michael Lass, union spokesman. Locals 44 and 2369 of the firefighters union are on strike.

A spokesman for the Lockport Fire Department said five off duty union firemen were being sent on a regular basis to Joliet to help maintain fire protection. A spokesman stressed the men were in Joliet at the request of the striking unions. On Friday and Saturday, the Joliet fire facilities were maintained by Chief Edward Peters, two nonstriking firemen and 25 nonunion city employees.

Help on way for Decatur Birdman

The Birdman of Decatur may get help from the Illinois General Assembly this week. Jimmy Soules, 77-year-old bird removal specialist, thought a law requiring him to have a pest control license was unfair even though he passed the licensing exam. "My company is not a pest control company whatsoever," he said. "Birds aren't pests, and besides I don't use pesticides to remove them."

Soules has been getting rid of sparrows, starlings and pigeons from buildings all over the country for about 35 years. "We have never failed," he said, pointing with pride to jobs he has performed after others failed. Reps. Rolland Tipword, D-Taylorville, and John Dunn, D-Decatur, responded to Soules' problem by introducing a bill to remove birds from the category of pests.

But some bitterness still lingers

BOLI dies as campaign issue

by NANCY GOTLER

Two years ago the Arlington Heights Board of Local Improvements was a major campaign issue with several candidates, including Village Pres. James T. Ryan, calling for its abolishment.

But this year the controversial special assessments have been forgotten, even though a BOLI member, Leonard F. Perkins, is running for trustee. Village policy changes made two years ago to curb BOLI's power and slow community growth have combined to quell the once hot issue, village officials say.

BUT WHILE BOLI has been removed from the political spotlight, there remains disagreement and even bitterness among its members, trustees and residents about when to use special assessments.

"There are trustees who don't understand what needs to be done in the village," BOLI Chairman David Patterson said. "It's gotten to the point where some trustees won't do anything that will cost voters money. If a half dozen people show up to complain about an assessment the board will vote the project down."

"Four or five years ago we had a very close agreement with trustees," he said. "Now there are differences."

One difference, Ryan says, is that "the village board now doesn't just rubber stamp their (BOLI's) recommendations."

"We're a lot more sensitive today to the problems of those taxed with special assessments," he said. "We're not as dedicated to every part of the village looking alike and to having sidewalks everywhere."

IN 1975 TRUSTEES killed an unpopular BOLI plan to build sidewalks in parts of Skarsdale, Stonegate and Sherwood subdivisions by exempting existing neighborhoods from the village's sidewalk installation policy.

That move decreased the number of potential special assessments in town — cutting BOLI's power — and fueled the question of special assessments as a campaign issue.

One resident who faced a special sidewalk assessment in 1975, Walter J. Maczka, mounted an unsuccessful presidential campaign against Ryan on the issue.

Other residents who were specially assessed in the past remain bitter about BOLI.

"The BOLI has a severe ego problem. They hate to lose," Pat Vaughn of 1124 W. Northwest Hwy. said. "They don't take the feelings of the residents into consideration. They just follow what the court tells them to do."

Mrs. Vaughn is one of a dozen residents along the highway who fought a special assessment for installing street lights along the largely commercial street.

SOME RESIDENTS settled for paying 25 per cent of the original assessment, but others and commercial property owners are still fighting the issue in court.

Despite the contention by some, such as Trustee Frank Palmatier who said, "We have worked out our differences," most say friction between the two boards remains.

"There presently are some personal clashes between BOLI and the village board," Trustee and former BOLI member August Bettman said.

"BOLI likes to operate completely independently. They feel they should have complete authority over everything they do," he said. "They say, 'We don't answer to anybody' and feel that the village board has hampered them."

"THE FRICTION still exists," Bettman said. "Part of the problem is that BOLI unintentionally has given people the impression that they're ramrodding these projects through."

Rent surcharge topic of meeting

An ordinance prohibiting Arlington Heights apartment owners from basing their rents on the number of persons living in an apartment will be considered tonight by the village board.

The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. at the municipal building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

Patterson said he has "no qualms" about forcing an improvement project in an area when 90 per cent of the residents oppose it.

"We take a lot of guff and get a lot of people mad at us," he said. "But at no time are we trying to be vindictive. We're just trying to do what's best for the community but often are misunderstood."

Drama group takes second in contest

The Prospect High School drama guild took second place in the drama division at the recent Illinois High School Assn. speech contest.

The five are Doug Scott, Mark Wagner, Rick Lewis, Miles Marek and Bonnie Lucas.

Thirty eight Prospect drama students participated in the state competition at Bradley University in Peoria last weekend. The contest drew students from 12 high schools which already had won district and level drama contests.

The Prospect students took second place in the state contest by performing a cutting from "A Company of Wayward Saints."

Students not named to the all-state cast, but who had leading roles in the play, are Lisa Simons, Rusty Ayers, Eleanor McGee and Tim Soper.

Police nab four, $40,000 in pot in combined bust

Four persons, two of them from Arlington Heights, were arrested and $40,000 worth of marijuana was confiscated Saturday in the climax of a combined investigation by Buffalo Grove and Arlington Heights police.

The two Arlington Heights men, both 18, were arrested Saturday afternoon in Arlington Heights after they allegedly sold five pounds of marijuana to undercover police agents. The arrests ended a three-week investigation by Buffalo Grove Det. Robert Quid.

The identities of the Arlington Heights suspects were not released by police pending investigation into the area drug traffic. Both were charged with possession and delivery of marijuana.

Later Saturday, Buffalo Grove and Arlington Heights police, supplied with information by informants, traveled to west suburban Bensenville where they arrested two men and recovered 41 pounds of marijuana valued at $40,000. Bensenville police assisted in the arrests.

JOSE HERNANDEZ, 28, and Teleford Canty, 24, both of 334 E. Hillside Ct., Bensenville, were taken into custody and charged with possession and sale of marijuana.

A spokesman for Bensenville police said Sunday he did not know if Her-andez and Canty still were being held in the municipal lockup.

March 18 Buffalo Grove and Arlington Heights police arrested Michael P. Johnson, 25, of 400 Touhy Ave., Elk Grove Township and 19-year-old Wayne E. Wadulak, 304 Meier Rd., Mount Prospect. Both were charged with possession and delivery of $1,800 worth of marijuana.

Saturday's initial arrests were made by Buffalo Grove police officers Quid, Gary Del Re, Steve Haisley and Sgt. Kenneth Blanchette; Arlington Heights police Sgt. Willard Salee, Pat Kennedy, Steve Lizas and Gerald Benzenboffer, and two Illinois Bureau of Investigation agents.

Botulism outbreak worst in history

Health officials in Pontiac, Mich. Sunday increased to 30 the number of confirmed botulism cases among patrons of a Mexican food restaurant, making the outbreak the worst in U.S. history. The new total of food poisoning cases at five hospitals came as the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta confirmed that canned hot green peppers were the source of the deadly poison. Three patients were in critical condition.

Dr. Robert Loeey Oakland County health director, said the peppers served in hot sauce at Trini and Carmen's Mexican Restaurant last week were improperly home canned by a former employee. Botulism, toxin is the deadliest known to man, more powerful than cobra venom or curare.

"One of the new patients ate lunch there on Thursday," Loeey said. "Current information now indicates that the contaminated peppers were eaten by patrons between 9 p.m. Monday and 2 p.m. Thursday. "This new development means the number of victims may increase in the days ahead."

King memorial march set today

Martin Luther King Jr. came to Memphis nine years ago to lead thousands of striking sanitation workers, most of them black, in a march for better wages. But the march exploded into a looting, fire-bombing, rock-throwing melee that left a 16-year-old black youth dead, 62 persons injured and 276 arrested.

A week later, April 4, 1968, King also was dead — the victim of a sniper who leaned out a flophouse window and fired a rifle shot that tore through King's throat. Another 5,000 persons, including many sanitation workers, plan a memorial march Monday — the ninth anniversary of the death of the man most closely identified with the racial equality struggle in America. They will pause briefly for a prayer service at the Lorraine Motel, where a plastic-flowered cross marks where King died on the motel's balcony.

Busjacker nabbed, no injuries

A 28-year-old man who said he had "nothing better to do" hijacked a Greyhound bus carrying 38 passengers near St. Augustine early Sunday and was arrested about two hours later at a police roadblock here, authorities said. The man who police identified as Ronnie Thomas Nance, of Winter Garden, Fla., brandished a 38-caliber pistol and ordered driver Robbie L. Jones, 37, of Savannah, Ga., to drive him to Arkansas, where his wife, from whom he is separated, lives.

Although Nance, a 6-foot-4, 200-pound man, fired about six shots during the incident, no one was injured, police said. Asked afterwards why he did it, Nance told a reporter for WJXT television station, "I had nothing better to do at that time of night."

Sadat arrives for Carter talks

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat arrived in Washington Sunday with a message for President Carter from the Palestine Liberation Organization and plans to buy American fighter planes. Sadat was greeted at Andrews Air Force Base by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and about 250 Egyptians living in the Washington area. He made no statement upon arrival and was driven to Blair House, across from the White House, where he was to spend the night before being formally welcomed by President Carter on Monday.

Bangladesh storm kills 428

A devastating storm has pounded Bangladesh for three days in a row, killing at least 428 persons and injuring hundreds more, sources in Dacca said Sunday. Government teams searched for survivors and bodies in remote areas where a cyclone struck Saturday in the Wisconsin-sized Asian nation of 70 million, the sources said.

Group cites torture in Namibia

Amnesty International accused South Africa Sunday of submitting political prisoners to torture and of other gross violations of human rights in South West Africa (Namibia). "African nationalist opponents of the illegal South African administration in Namibia are subject to arbitrary arrest, detention without trial and torture," the London-based independent worldwide human rights organization said in a 16-page report. Consistent reports received over a period of years, it said, "indicate that the use of torture is institutionalized in Namibia."

cluding a new bumper in the claim.

Costs of the bumper plus labor to install it ranged from $75 to $113.50.

Only one shop, Roderick's Body and Fender in Palatine charged $3 for the estimate. The owner said the $3 would be deducted from the total cost if the work was brought to his shop.

All the shops said the repair work would take from two to three days to complete after the necessary parts were ordered. The wait for parts would take up to two weeks, most shops said.

Only three shops said they provided free loaner cars to body shop customers, including Palella's Auto Body in Rolling Meadows, Casten Auto Body in Rolling Meadows and Des Plaines Rolling Meadows and Des Plaines Chrysler-Plymouth.

One dealer, Tom Todd Chevrolet in Wheeling, said free loaners are provided for work in excess of $500. Five other dealers said they had rental cars available, with costs ranging from $8 to $12 per day.

TEN SHOPS, including three independents, gave discounts on the cost of parts. Discounts of 10 per cent were given by Palella, Casten, Roderick's, Des Plaines Chrysler-Plymouth, Hoskins Chevrolet of Elk Grove Village, Schmerler Ford of Elk Grove Village and Larry Faul Oldsmobile of Schaumburg.

Discounts of 15 per cent were given by Tom Todd, Lattof Chevrolet in Arlington Heights and Colonial Chevrolet in Schaumburg.

An employee at Casten said the discounts usually are provided as a "professional courtesy" because the shops get up to 25 per cent discounts on parts.

Only two shops, Tom Todd and Hoskins, opened the hood of the car when inspecting the damage. Only the Tom Todd employee checked the headlights to determine if they had been damaged.

One dealer, Grand-Spaulling Dodge in Buffalo Grove, was unable to give an estimate because it did not have the General Motors cost list, a spokesman said.

Consumers rant, loudest over high bills, insurance

Auto repairs — they rank among the most frustrating, costly consumer complaints handled annually by the attorney general's office and the Better Business Bureau.

Usually the complaints center on engine repair work, but body work is not immune from the criticism. Soaring costs of auto parts and labor have hiked dramatically the cost of auto body work in recent years, and that in turn has sent the cost of auto insurance spiraling.

Figures released last year by the American Mutual Insurance Alliance showed that the cost to replace all parts of a demolished 1976 car purchased for $4,488 would be $19,979.

OFFICIALS SAY it is difficult to compare auto body shops and repair services strictly on the basis of the costs they charge.

"There are so many variables involved," Jim Baumhart of the Better Business Bureau said. "The quality of the work (of the more expensive shop) might be better," he said.

Bureau statistics for 1976 show that complaints about auto repairs ranked as the fifth biggest consumer concern after mail order operations, car purchases, home furnishing firms and home improvement firms.

But the number of auto repair-related complaints settled by the bureau totaled only 58 per cent compared to the overall settlement rate of 74 per cent, Baumhart said.

Insurance companies, aware of the high costs of auto body work, keep abreast of the "going rates" in an attempt to avoid paying unnecessary costs, Baumhart said. The companies usually require a claimant to secure three estimates on repairs, authorizing the most competitive shop to do the work, he said.

Paying unjustified high estimates does happen, however.

"Of course it happens," Baumhart said. "Whenever there are people involved there are going to be games played. Does it happen a lot? No, it doesn't."

THE LONG-STANDING consumer suspicions about auto repairs have prompted Atty. General William J. Scott to begin an industrywide investigation into auto dealership practices.

Scott's consumer protection division began the inquiry in January to determine how the industry trains and supervises employees and how consumer complaints are handled.

The study could lead to recommendations on consumer regulations for the industry, but Baumhart said the benefits of new legislation could be marginal.

"There is legislation on the books now," he said. "It's a matter of what they want to go after. Is it going to take care of the guy who will go out and rip someone off anyway? More than likely the legitimate companies are the ones who will comply anyway."

Search of quarry for Glueckert girl proves futile

by DANN GIRE

Threatening thunderclouds hovered low on the horizon, darkening the sky and casting a dismal atmosphere on the rock quarries southeast of Elgin.

A fine morning mist saturated the air with a sharp chill that penetrated the warmest clothing.

It was a fitting day for the appointed task. It was Saturday and skin divers from area fire departments — including Schaumburg and Mount Prospect — underwater recovery teams, Army reservists and Mount Prospect police were searching for the body of missing Mount Prospect teenager Barbara Glueckert. The effort would prove futile.

DET. SGT. PATRICK Hallihan of Mount Prospect, who has headed attempts to find the girl since her disappearance Aug. 21, minced no words in addressing skin diving crews.

"We're looking for a body," he announced matter-of-factly. "When you come across a car with its trunk locked — that's what we want."

While 50 divers from nine fire departments began their search of murky, quarry waters, a ground crew of 65 members of the 12th Special Forces, a Green Beret unit stationed at the Army Reserve Center in Arlington Heights, combed the countryside looking for possible grave sites.

Mt. Prospect Police Chief Ralph J. Doney visited the site briefly to check on the operation.

The area being searched was only 10 miles from Huntley, Ill., where 14-year-old Barbara Glueckert and a friend were taken to a rock concert by Thomas Urlacher, then 24, of Algonquin Shores.

Eight months later, both police and Barbara's parents, Robert and Gail Glueckert, 610 N. Russel St., Mount Prospect, are convinced the girl is dead and her body buried somewhere near Huntley.

ROBERT GLUECKERT said the search "was a good effort," but "it was only an elimination process more or less."

The missing girl's father said Sunday even though police did not find a body, "they can eliminate that area for further searching."

Glueckert said "a big push to get this solved" will take place in two weeks with the help of specialists who will "help us in a special way."

Glueckert said he could not elaborate on what he has planned except that local police "will be in on it."

Mount Prospect detectives have wanted to search the rock quarries for several months, but harsh weather and very cold temperatures had prevented it until Saturday.

Skin diving crews recovered several cars in the quarries. Four were found in one quarry alone. But the day ended too soon for the searchers, who had nothing but a number of abandoned cars and miscellaneous pieces of junk to show for their labor.

DET. JACK GNIOT of Mount Prospect was philosophic about the apparent waste of time.

"Well, at least it's not our first disappointment," he said.

But for Hallihan, the futile search was simply another step in his investigation.

"We've just eliminated another of the sites we've been wanting to search since a while back. We've got a lot of other places to look at. It's all contingent on information we get from the grand jury," Hallihan said.

Urlacher, a chief suspect in the girl's disappearance, has been subpoenaed to appear Tuesday before a Kane County grand jury investigating the incident.

HE WAS arrested and extradicted from San Francisco late last year on charges of contributing to the delinquency of a minor in connection with the disappearance.

But March 16, Cook County Assistant States' Atty. Terry Sullivan said he would not prosecute the charge against Urlacher so that evidence can be used against him if a "more serious" charge is brought against him later.

The contributing charge was dismissed by Cook County Associate Circuit Court Judge Marvin J. Peters.

Harper faculty, board close gap

by DICK DAHL

The Harper College faculty and trustees are slowly closing the gap in faculty salary talks as the April 7 negotiating deadline nears.

David Macaulay, chief faculty negotiator, said Friday the faculty has dropped its request for total salary increase from 11 per cent to 9.5 per cent. The board offer has been raised from 3 per cent to 3.5 per cent, he said.

"The salary differences are closer, he said, "but on the other issues there was no progress although we modified our position to one we thought would be more acceptable to the board."

THE TWO MAIN modifications the faculty made, he said, are:

- Faculty at the top of their ranks would get 90 per cent of the negotiated increase, a decrease of 10 per cent from the faculty's first request.

The board limits the numbers of teachers who can achieve certain ranks, such as professor, assistant professor and associate professor and sets limits on maximum salary in each rank.

The faculty also has complained teachers at the tops of their ranks are penalized by the salary ceilings because they don't get the same raises as those below them.

Three faculty members received no raises last year and there are 16 facing the possibility of no raise this year, Macaulay said.

"We modified our language on scope" in a requested recognition agreement between the board and faculty senate for next year.

The board recognizes the faculty in bargaining for salary and fringe benefits. The faculty had requested recognition for "professional conditions, including a grievance procedure," Macaulay said, but has withdrawn this request.

Macaulay said he isn't optimistic about a settlement by the deadline Thursday, but said "We're hoping for one and trying very hard."

"We'RE GOING TO call a faculty meeting next Wednesday and hope to have a vote on the board's best offer."

There will be only one more negotiating session before then, on Tuesday afternoon. Macaulay said the board negotiating team has agreed to bargain into the night on Tuesday if necessary.

If the faculty rejects the board's offer, it would set the stage for an 11th-hour bargaining session Thursday. The negotiations contract expires at midnight that night.

6 tie in Herald pick-the-winner Oscar contest

Predicting the Oscar winners proved to be a hit-or-miss operation both for experts and Northwest suburbanites who tested their luck in The Herald-sponsored Academy Awards contest.

With 974 entries, Herald judges found a six-way tie with seven out of the 10 categories guessed correctly.

Splitting the $100 prize are Harold Drendel, Schaumburg; Tim Flynn, Mount Prospect; Darlene Krzyak, Mount Prospect; Betty Malloy, Elk Grove Village; George W. Stefan, Arlington Heights; and Thomas Verchert, Wheeling.

TALLIES SHOWED 38 runners-up with six correct choices. Six persons were baffled completely by the academy's choices.

The average number of correct choices was four, with best original song the easiest selection. Best foreign film and best sound were the most difficult for Northwest suburbanites to pick correctly.

The academy's choices in the 10 categories included in The Herald's contest were Faye Dunaway, Network, best actress; Peter Finch, Network, best actor; Beatrice Straight, Network, best supporting actress; Jason Robards, All the President's Men, best supporting actor; "Evergreen," A Star is Born, best original song; All the President's Men for best sound; Fellini's Casanova for best costumes; Black and White in Color from the Ivory Coast for best foreign film; John Avildsen, Rocky, best director; and Rocky for best picture.

Many factors influence voters

8— Section 1 Monday, April 4, 1977 THE HERALD

The overwhelming victor: some guy named Wyatt Earp.

"That's the trouble in nonpartisan elections where voters don't have party labels to attach to candidates," Bowen said. "They tend to fall back on cues or clues that are recognizable to them with no other standards for their decision," he said.

Names that are tinged with a definite ethnicity can prove both advantageous or a liability, Bowen said.

"The general point made in what little literature there is on voting behavior is that in that sort of situation where the electors don't have any easy labels to fix on and all other things being equal, the first position on the ballot would be the preferable one," Bowen said.

"But if you have a candidate who is well-known, that would override the advantage of the first position," he said.

IF NAME RECOGNITION is that important, then incumbent trustees Frank Palmatier and Alfred Barboro may have an advantage, as would Ralph Clabour, a VIC candidate who is a former village president and trustee.

Two independent candidates, Martin Cawley and Victor Johnson, also are well known in some areas of the village because they were active in the park district's effort to get portions of the Nike Base for a golf course.

has been determined by the order that nominating petitions are filed by the candidates. The top spot on the ballot two years ago is given much of the credit for the strong showing of Walter Maczka, who amassed 4,627 votes and finished sixth among the eight candidates for village trustee. Maczka spent only about $100 on his campaign.

With Maczka's relative success in mind, trustee candidate Goldberg this year made a special effort to be the first to file petitions. His strategy, however, was upset when village officials decided ballot position should be decided by a lottery. With that drawing, the top ballot position among independent candidates went to Martin Cawley.

VOTE REPUBLICAN APRIL 5, ELK GROVE TOWNSHIP

Paid for by Republican Township Election Committee, 200 Marshall, Des Plaines, Illinois—A. M. Stevens, Chairman.

Last April, the showers caught Chris Armbruster empty-handed.

This April, she's doing much better at Home.

There are lots of ways you can get soaked, by a sudden shower, or by a bad investment.

At Home Federal Savings you can avoid both. Deposit $250 or more in a passbook savings account, and we'll give you a free umbrella.

Your money will go to work for you in an insured-safe account, earning 5 1/4% interest—more than any bank can pay on similar accounts. It will compound predictably with daily interest. Also, deposits made by the tenth of the month earn interest from the first, if left in your account until the end of the calendar quarter.

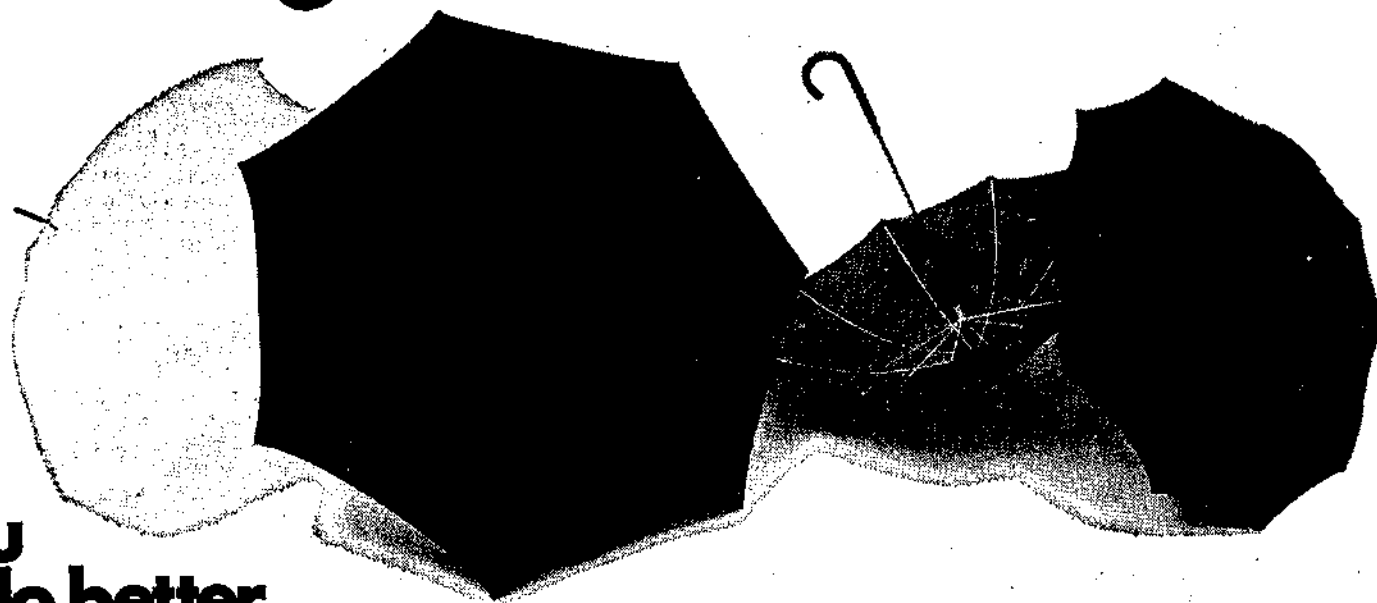

And your umbrella will go to work for you whenever it rains, keeping you safe and dry from unpredictable spring skies. It's available in blue, red and tan for ladies and black for men.

So open an account at a convenient Home Federal branch office near you. And start saving for a rainy day.

Offer good at Buffalo Grove branch office.

Limit of one gift per family.
Offer good until April 30, 1977, or while supply lasts.

The way we see it

Dist. 211, 125 endorsements

Following are our endorsements for Saturday's election. There are no contests in High School Dist. 207 and 214.

High School Dist. 211

High School Dist. 211 is a well managed district that in the past year has moved intelligently toward dealing with a potentially explosive problem — the closing of Palatine High School.

Credit for avoiding a community crisis over closing the school must go to the Dist. 211 Board of Education, which prepared the community for the step and then worked cooperatively with the village and park district to try to find a public use for the building and land.

In addition, Dist. 211, through tight budgeting, has managed to avoid the financial crises that have plagued other districts.

The board's handling of this and other situations reflects well on its members.

Voters should reelect incumbents JEAN FISLER and ROBERT SEGER to three-year terms on the board.

Fisler, an attorney who donates her services to The Bridge Youth Services, is a strong, independent board member who has spoken up for student and parent rights in the district.

Seeger, a public relations executive, has served the district well for two terms. He has lent expertise to labor negotiations and has a good grasp of the district's problems.

Both Seeger and Fisler should be returned to the Dist. 211 board to continue the job they have been doing.

High School Dist. 125

We endorse incumbents FRANK CLAYTON and WILLIAM "MIKE" SWANSON and newcomer FRANCIS WOLOWIC for the three 3-year terms on the High School Dist. 125 board.

Swanson has been a good board president, doing his best to heal factions resulting from last year's departure of the superintendent. He is also a strong advocate of keeping the board out of the day-to-day running of the school.

Clayton has been a hard-working, thoughtful board member who can consider both sides of every issue.

Wolowic's commitment to good vocational education at Stevenson High School will be an asset to the board. He has been involved in the district in the past and has a good understanding of its needs.

Election of these three candidates would give representation to the various areas of the district, which is unusually large and diverse. Wolowic is from the Diamond Lake Dist. 76 area at the northern end of the district which is not now represented. Clayton is from Buffalo Grove while Swanson is from the unincorporated Prairie View area.

Smoking bans a relief

Non-smokers may soon be able to BREATHE a sigh of relief if two proposals to restrict smoking in public places are passed into law.

The Illinois House already approved overwhelmingly a bill banning smoking in hospital patient rooms, elevators, buses, theaters, libraries and museums, except in specially designated smoking areas. A similar Senate bill is expected to pass and, barring any unexpected objections from Gov. Jim Thompson, will become law.

Backers of the state legislation say the current bills, though limited, are a starting point. With amendments in subsequent sessions, the law could be expanded to include restaurants and large offices.

In Chicago, independent alderman Martin Oberman plans to introduce an ordinance that would limit smoking in virtually every public place, including restaurants and shared offices. Special smoking areas could be set up under the ordinance, provided they are not more than 50 per cent of the total space.

Both the state bills and Oberman's proposed ordinance impose fines of $10 to $100 on violators.

The Chicago Lung Association states that non-smokers now outnumber smokers three to one in Illinois. The dangers and irritations from second-hand smoke are a legitimate concern.

The maxim of majority rule with minority rights is a good one to use in the war between smokers and non-smokers.

A sensible segregation of smokers and non-smokers will help clear the air for those who object to tobacco fumes while protecting the rights of persons who want to smoke.

I think this scale is inaccurate so you shouldn't collect additional funds now!

Arlington Heights

IT IS IRONIC that the Republican Slate (you know, slated by party bosses) for the upcoming Palatine Township election waits until the last minute to mail its campaign propaganda. Obviously, rebuttal is not part of their program, nor are public appearances at Candidates' Night part of their "responsiveness" to local needs.

While they are taking credit for their accomplishments, why don't they take credit for a 16 per cent increase in Township levies since 1972? If tax increases are better, then our local government must be the best.

Incidentally, roads in the unincorporated area should be good, since village taxpayers support them. And certainly at the expense of village roads, which are in horrendous condition.

But that's OK. Because the Republican Village Board is slated by the same group as the Township. Let's face it — a Machine is a Machine.

If you're against Machines in principle, then don't vote Republican in Palatine. Unless, of course, you really want a Machine that grinds by the "right" rules.

JUST READ YOUR endorsements and appreciate your wise choices. But I take exception to your words about Merle Willis. His experience and wisdom are sorely needed and because he is retired and has the time to serve makes him more desirable than the super busy young bloods that are already over-extended in their commitments.

It's a shame that we waste so much vitality, knowledge, experience by opting for young blood. Our young men have enough stress already competing in the business world, raising a family and keeping up with their church activities without also running for office.

We are letting a great natural resource go down the drain by passing up our retired people who have the time, energy and experience to do a top notch job. They are loyal, prompt and eager to serve. Why do we constantly pat them on the back for a fine job and then endorse a harried, overburdened younger man or woman.

'Parking logic'

You sometimes wonder if there are any qualified or logical people running or attempting to run the Village of Mount Prospect. The village board and specific members on it have been raising that question since their election in 1975. Now two of them want to be mayor by over-authorizing library board funds, $5,000 Christmas parties and other inept financial stands.

Now add the finance committee, downtown commission and assistant village manager's rush to line up with their inept counterparts in their parking plans.

Currently daily users of Mount Prospect's parking facilities, if they can find space, pay $120 annually at the rate of 50 cents per day for the "privilege." I'm amazed that subsidization of the magnitude voted, $45 annually, even existed or is going to be allowed to continue for a very select few. Logic might say that the guarantee of space is worth even more than the $125 proposed.

But what is a "commuter?" Is the action intended to penalize those who travel from Mount Prospect? What about those who travel to Mount Prospect for work or shopping? Even if someone could explain what there is to shop for in downtown Mount Prospect, I'd still question penalizing people who buy in other areas of Mount Prospect, pay taxes in Mount Prospect and vote in Mount Prospect. Why should someone traveling to Mount Prospect pay less to park than those who travel from Mount Prospect. Is the offset in shopper income really offset by the spending of commuters?

Our planners do not seem to have covered all areas of problem solving. Why do downtown shoppers and employees have to park right next to stores when in the shopping plazas and malls a one or two-block equivalent walk is not unusual nor resisted? Land use in the downtown area is a critical problem, yet no one seems to have evaluated the use of a multi-level facility which at proper rates could self retire bonds necessary to construct it. Why permit pick up at rush hours in the immediate vicinity of the railroad station? Why not better control of traffic lights at rush hours to facilitate flow instead of impeding it? What about better traffic routes into and out of the area at peak hours. Or maybe reason and logic are too much to expect.

A new home was triumph to newlyweds

It happened a long time ago. But I remember. I remember . . .

To newlyweds, everything is possible. Mountains are not climbed; they are skipped. Disaster, disease, death — these are tragedies which occur to the old, the poor, the disenchanted.

We were a brilliant young couple prepared to defy a decadent world. I wanted to buy a house. A house is more than a building and a lot. It is a castle; a sovereignty; the ultimate responsibility of a man and a woman.

THE OLD CAR toured northern New Jersey. Everything we liked cost too much. Some towns were pretty. Others crayed the sky with black smoke. A few were so new that the streets sagged with mud.

West Englewood was like that. It was spring and there was dogwood confused with color and wisteria drooping like old lace. We stopped in front of 1827 Longview Court. The lawn sign said "For Sale."

We sneaked looks at it. Brand new. Carpenters inside were finishing floors. Two stories. Cape Cod. Fieldstone facing. No coal furnace — an almost noiseless oil burner.

"ASK," SHE SAID. I got out. She sat in the car with the baby. My wife didn't want to be too far away from New York and Jersey City. We had roots in those cities. I buttoned my topcoat and put on all my dignity and borrowed a little extra.

The salesman stood inside the door. I had never set foot inside a new house. It had a smell of wood. The man was old and gray — maybe 45. I asked a lot of questions. My expression defied him to call me Sonny.

It had a fieldstone fireplace. The rooms appeared to be roomy. The back of the house had a small yard looking across to a National Guard armory. He showed me the batts of insulation in the attic and I nodded as though I understood what he was talking about.

MY WIFE CAME in with the baby. She looked up and down and sideways. Her big eyes became bigger. "Furniture," she whispered. "We haven't got enough." I pulled myself up to my full five-seven-and-a-half. "One thing at a time. Do you like it?" "Love it," she whispered.

I asked the salesman how much. "Fifty-nine ninety," he said. "A steal." "Oh," I said in regret, "I was prepared to go all the way to five thousand, but this is a little beyond us."

He wrote leaning against a wall. We would need $599 as a down payment. We talked finances. He assured me that, as a working reporter earning top dollar at $80 a week, I was eligible for an FHA loan.

"No," I said. "I don't want to commit all our savings to a house. To me, a house is a capital investment. If one of us gets sick . . ."

THE MORTGAGE, he said, would be financed by the West Englewood Bank. They had a president named Weber who loved to make loans to nice young couples. Mr. Weber would give us a 20-year mortgage at $38.60 a month.

Too much, too long, I said. He said he couldn't come down a dime. We said we'd think about it. Not too long, he warned. If he had a firm offer by tomorrow, he'd have to sell.

We drove back to our little flat. Only the baby slept. We loved that house. We wanted that house. We had to have it. I had told the man we didn't want to commit our savings.

We had none. No savings account. No cash. I had a pair of Florsheim shoes for which I paid $8, and a gray suit which cost $35. She had crossed red foxes which bit each other around her neck.

YOUNG LOVE will not be denied. I asked my boss for a raise. He thought about it in the precise manner in which I dwelled on that house. "Okay," he said. "You get five more a week starting now. I expect to see that five in your work."

A New York bank permitted me a loan of $300. We hurried back to the salesman. "Listen," I said. "Let me give you $300 now and let me sign a personal note for the other $299. Give us a break. If you don't get the rest of the dough in three months, I'll sell my car."

He pretended to think he was being swindled. He tapped his forehead a long time. "Okay," he said. "It's wrong. It's illegal. I'll probably lose my commission, but all right. Sign here. And here. And here."

The house was ours. We slaved. We perspired. I planted trees. I hauled big rocks with which to line the driveway. We bought second-hand chairs and tables. And carpet.

We paid it off. No triumph measures up to that one.

It happened a long time ago. But I remember. I remember . . .

Mediator becomes 'marathon man' during long labor-management talks

by LEA TONKIN

Sam Mazza sometimes works 40 hours in a row without a break. Week-ends are not part of his life and the job is "tense... nerve-racking."

But, generally, the only time Mazza receives publicity is after he has failed, because as a federal mediator Mazza is not called into action until negotiations have broken down.

"It's always a tense situation," Mazza says.

Sam Mazza

A commissioner in the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service (FMCS), Mazza also is a veteran negotiator on both sides of the labor-management fence. The Palatine resident said he enjoys his work despite the occasionally long hours and the emotional strain of some mediation sessions.

"WHEN I FIRST started, they told me, 'Sam, you can't beat the hours,'" Mazza said. He later discovered that bargaining sessions may last from two hours to 40 hours nonstop, sometimes for days on end.

"This isn't a 9 to 5 job. We're on call 24 hours a day," Mazza said. We might work Sundays and holidays. So time means nothing."

Most of the 140 and 175 cases a year handled by Mazza involve peaceable labor agreements. Based in Chicago, he works with union and management representatives in northern Illinois and southern Wisconsin.

Under the Taft-Hartley law, the FMCS must be notified 60 days before a labor contract expires and 30 days before a potential strike deadline. Mazza or one of the other commissioners serving this region is assigned to a case when the notice is received.

Mazza calls the employer and the union involved, fills out a progress report and continues to check on the progress of negotiations.

OUT OF 140 cases a year, there might be only three or four strikes, Mazza said. "The only ones you ever hear about are the ones in which we have in a sense, failed," he said.

Mediation involves the ability to help people reach common ground, Mazza said. "You have to have rapport. You have to be able to tell them about different alternatives."

Although Mazza doesn't claim to have all of the answers in a labor conflict, he can talk to both sides involved to determine which contract provisions they'll negotiate and which are most important.

Mazza tries to outline the appropriate precedents for a given situation. "There are hundreds of ways to plan seniority, for example," Mazza said. "It's up to me to go back in my experience and find out which one applies."

Although the federal mediator's role is one of counsel rather than enforcement, he will call labor and management representatives for mediation sessions when a strike is imminent.

"WE GO TO management and we start probing them," Mazza said. He looks for "smoke signals," hints about their willingness to negotiate a "final" offer. "Then we go to the union and we do the same thing," Mazza said. "When we find common ground, we can bring them together for face-to-face talks."

There are times, Mazza said, when his best efforts fail to cool the tempers of excited negotiators. "I let people shout at each other," he said. "Some of the language, it's embarrassing. Even at my age, I blush."

"Let them get it out of their systems. For three years, they've had to listen to the boss. Now when they're yelling at each other across the table, they're equals," Mazza said.

In the midst of an emotional outburst, negotiators sometimes paint themselves into a corner, he said. Once this happens, such as the announcement of "final, final" wage offer, the mediator will try to open up a new line of communication between employee and business representatives.

"MOST OFTEN, it's listening," Mazza said of his work. "A union may present 40 issues, but they want only four." A little arm-twisting, such as a reminder about the heavy cost of a strike, may be used by the mediator, he said.

Mazza, who has been in the labor relations business nearly 40 years, said the same issues such as wages and fringe benefits come up time after time. "But each situation is different," he said. An increasing militance among the younger people involved in labor relations and the expanding number of women negotiators are changes he sees.

Mazza began his labor union work in 1937 for the former UAW-CIO organization, moving up through the ranks to the presidency of a Chicago local. He became an industrial relations manager for a Chicago steel firm in 1953, and 12 years later joined the FMCS.

After years of mediation service, Mazza said he still gets excited when he's working with labor and management representatives toward a settlement. "I take my work home," Mazza said. "I get emotionally involved. You're maneuvering people and when you're successful, it's a feather in your cap."

"You really look forward to these challenges," Mazza said. "You really do."

New cars 5 miles gallon better than older models

The car you buy this year will take you 5 miles further on a gallon of fuel than the car you bought three years ago.

The Highway Users Federation reports the average efficiency of 1977 model cars now is 18.6 miles a gallon. In the early 1970s, the average new car was getting between 12 and 13 miles a gallon.

The goal for the 1980 model year is an average of 20 miles a gallon for all cars sold in the United States.

Translated into pocketbook terms, that means substantial savings for the motorist.

Consumer Reports, for example, states fuel costs are about $375 for 15,000 miles of driving in a manual shift Chevette. The car is rated at 19 miles a gallon city driving and 34 miles a gallon on the highway.

By comparison, a six cylinder automatic Plymouth Volare, rated at 11.5 miles a gallon city driving, would require $610 for fuel for driving the same distance.

Federation figures show the average efficiency of all cars on the road has risen from 13.1 miles in 1973 to 13.53 miles in 1975.

The Highway Users Federation estimates highway travel will increase from nearly 1.4 trillion vehicle miles in 1976 to more than two trillion vehicle miles in the year 2000. Fuel use, however is expected to remain fairly steady.

Business briefs

FEA slates heat oil price forums

The Federal Energy Administration has scheduled hearings today and April 12 in Chicago, to determine why heating oil prices have exceeded its monitoring system index prices in North Central region states. The North Central region states are Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North and South Dakota, Ohio and Wisconsin. The FEA started its price monitoring system after price controls were removed on heating oil, diesel fuel and kerosene last July. The agency's index prices are estimates of what prices would have been if price controls remained in effect. The hearings today will be in Room 1908 of the Dirksen Federal Building, 219 S. Dearborn St., and the April 12 hearing is in Room 2503 of the same building. Both hearings will begin at 9 a.m. Requests to appear at the hearings should be directed to Raymond Swiderski at the Federal Energy Administration, 175 W. Jackson Blvd., Chicago 60604; telephone 353-8549.

65,000 lbs. aluminum recycled

Chicago area residents turned in nearly 65,000 pounds of aluminum cans and other aluminum products for recycling during March, reported R. J. Woosley, district manager for the Reynolds Aluminum Recycling Co. The March collections were equal to approximately 1.5 million beverage cans that might otherwise be litter, Woosley said. Payments of more than $11,000 were made to persons who turned in aluminum at the area collection centers in Hanover Park, Niles, Hillside and other Chicago area locations.

Firms advised to use lock boxes

by LeROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — How big a balance should a company keep in its bank account to pay bills — enough to pay one day's bills, a week's bills or a month's?

None of these. The optimum balance is zero, not even a dime, says Richard Poje, head of Phoenix-Hecht, Inc.

The Chicago firm, a subsidiary of Belden Corp., provides more than 100 of the country's biggest banks with cash management systems based on detailed analysis of the time it takes checks and drafts to move point to point by mail.

The banks use the information to get their commercial depositors to set up "lock boxes," mailing addresses, at strategic points to facilitate their cash inflow and to minimize the amount of time they have to tie up money in a bank account to pay bills.

"OF COURSE, the zero balance in the disbursement bank account never is reached," Poje said, "but the closer a company comes to it the more money it will have available for operating and investment capital."

Even more important is cutting down the time that checks from customers take in arriving by mail. A properly set up lockbox mail address system may enable a firm to collect its accounts a day and half earlier each month.

Results are dramatic. A company with sales of $20 million a year might save $7,000 to $8,000 a month in various costs by using the collection and disbursement cash management system provided by a bank served by Phoenix-Hecht, Poje said.

Phoenix-Hecht has been in the business since 1969 and has no direct competition. "Between our copyright position and the vast amount of work it takes to set up the data base for a system, we haven't attracted competitors," Poje said. "The big banks began doing cash flow management for themselves years ago but it was on a rather sketchy basis until we came along."

HAVING NEARLY all the country's big banks on its customer roster, Phoenix-Hecht now is getting a lot of interest from middle-sized regional banks that are eager to offer business depositors cash management services in order to compete with the big banks.

One of these systems is so complex that a detailed description of them might as well be written in Greek or Sanskrit as far as most of us are concerned. However, Poje said the principle is practiced by everyone who pays personal bills out of a pay check. Who hasn't written an overdraft check knowing it can't clear until after pay day?

And what charge account holder has not waited to charge a major purchase until the day after the store's billing cycle has closed, a date learned by experience? That way there is a full month's billing cycle and the grace period free of special credit charges.

"My wife and other wives save families lots of money that way," Poje said.

Janice Lee has hospital work as ministry

by ELEANOR RIVES

"Everyone has a ministry — a purpose in life — whether he consciously knows it or not."

The speaker was a slight brunette woman, her hair drawn back in a carefree manner, her intense dark eyes gleaming in a way that seemed to say, "I'm happy with myself. I've found what I wanted."

Hard to believe that Janice Lee is the mother of a 17-year-old daughter. Hard to imagine the endless number of trips from her sedate, spacious, tree-shaded home in Barrington Hills to Seabury-Western Theological Seminary in Evanston, or to Highland Park Hospital.

Mrs. Lee is in her senior year at the Episcopal seminary, working for a master of divinity degree. She has studied such broad areas as liturgics, Old Testament, New Testament, church history, theology, pastoral ministry, ethics and moral theology. Twenty years have elapsed since she was awarded a bachelor's degree in psychology from Carleton College.

ONLY 10 OF THE 75 students at Seabury-Western are women. "But we are getting more applications from women all the time," said Robert Shahan, assistant dean for student services.

Janice is also doing a year's internship as a chaplain at Highland Park Hospital. Before that she was chaplain at a Waukegan developmental center for severely retarded children, and before that, in the summer of 1975, she did her clinical pastoral education (CPE) training at Lutheran General Hospital.

"That was an intense situation, a real mind-blowing experience," she said. "Like being in an encounter group — but all of the time. It was a way to find out how other people accepted me. Then I would go home and transform myself into the housewife, straightening up, cooking dinner. That summer was the hardest."

The possibility of being ordained as an Episcopal priest hadn't occurred to Janice. She hoped to be ordained a deacon. Before entering the seminary three years ago, she discussed it with Bishop James Montgomery in Chicago and with the rector of St. Mark's Episcopal Church in Barrington where she is the only woman to be a lay reader or to administer the chalice at communion.

IN THE FALL OF 1976, when it was decided at the General Convention of the Episcopal Church that women could be ordained, she began thinking seriously about it. "But ultimately it is the bishop who decides who may be ordained, and it is he who does the ordaining," she said.

Ordained or not, the ministry she plans to pursue during her lifetime is that of hospital chaplain. "That's where my heart is," she says softly.

What led Janice Lee along the path of religious commitment?

Several events in her life might be called turning points. When she was only eight years old, family problems troubled her. After marriage, she had some tragic experiences related to childbirth. "But each was a growing experience," she said. "You have a choice — wallow in it, or learn from it."

In her personal experience as a hospital patient, she often wished there were someone she could talk to, a need that influenced her decision to become a chaplain. "The most important thing about being a chaplain is first to find out where the patient is emotionally, then to try to be there with him," she said.

JANICE DESCRIBED her experiences as ranging from sublimely happy to extremely sad. As a listener, she tends to find herself with people who are dying. She suspects her ministry will be more and more with the terminally ill.

"I believe with all my heart that God works through people, loving and caring for each other," she said fervently. "The longer I'm in hospital work, the more things I see — the so-called coincidences — that are the work of God. These things no longer surprise me."

Morning studies over, Janice Lee heads for Highland Park Hospital.

"We experience God through each other," says the Rev. Marion Kanaly, right, of patient-chaplain relationship.

Chaplaincy alternative for giving pastoral care

by ELEANOR RIVES
(First in a series)

Although the number of women enrolled in seminaries has nearly doubled since 1971, and although the Roman Catholic and Missouri Synod Lutherans are the only major Christian denominations that do not officially ordain women, few women are actually being called to lead churches.

"One-third of all students in Presbyterian seminaries are women," said Dr. James P. Martin of First Presbyterian Church of Arlington Heights. "But at present not enough churches are calling them."

In the Jewish religion, it is possible for a woman to become a rabbi or cantor. The Chicago Rabbinical Society reports none in the Greater Chicago area.

Nevertheless, thousands of women are finding other avenues of religious expression, special ministries in which to dedicate their lives to their religious principles.

ONE SUCH AVENUE is that of becoming a chaplain, serving within a parish or within the boundaries of church membership, or in prisons, nursing homes, schools, mental health centers or hospitals.

An ongoing program at Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge, is Clinical Pastoral Education (CPE). The 12-week basic period for chaplain trainees includes on-the-floor experience under supervision. Most hospitals require four quarters of CPE, but sometimes accept other credentials in place of a portion of the training.

Among the students who go through CPE are seminary students, ordained Protestant clergy, priests, nuns, rabbis and laypersons. The percentage of women has risen to one-third.

ONE SUCH WOMAN is Betty Skonieczny of Des Plaines, mother of three children, 10, 9 and 5. A Roman Catholic, Betty entered the chaplain training program last fall after years of self-searching and with the encouragement of her priest.

"From childhood on, I had always wanted to help people," she said. "As a young woman, personal problems interrupted what might have been a nursing career. Later, after marriage, I began doing volunteer work in a hospital. It was then I realized that nursing would never satisfy me. What I wanted to give the patient was love and care."

Betty now carries two loads: training in CPE and working from scratch toward a college degree. She is picking up some credits at Oakton Community College, may perhaps work for more at Loyola, and is presently negotiating with Mundelein to work toward a "degree by contract," with some credit for life experiences. "I must get my educational requirements out of the way before I can apply to the archdiocese for certification," she said.

AT LUTHERAN General Hospital, she is in the midst of a course in Crisis Intervention, one of three women in a class of eight. She is enthusiastic about the human ecology approach at the hospital, that of ministering to the total person — mind, body and spirit.

"I know I have a hard road in front of me," she said. "As a woman working toward becoming an unordained lay-chaplain, I am a pioneer in the Roman Catholic faith."

Her goal after certification is to work as a hospital chaplain. Her long term goal is to convince the business world of the need for a chaplain when an employee or his family are seriously ill — to give industry a better understanding of the family and the employe the opportunity to unburden himself, and thus speed the healing process.

BETTY IS MORE certain than she was last fall that her decision to become a lay-chaplain is right for her. "Each day I become more confident that this is what I have always wanted to do with my life," she said.

If Betty Skonieczny is at the bottom of the chaplain ladder, the Rev. Marion Kanaly is at the top. Not only is she serving as staff chaplain in a medical-surgical unit at Lutheran General administering to patients, their families and members of the hospital staff, but as a certified CPE supervisor, she is in charge of some of the training courses.

She is the first full-time female minister to be on the hospital's pastoral care staff.

MARION KANALY'S professional career included teaching in the graduate school of Simmons College in Boston. Later she held the post of librarian at Wellesley College. During that time she had once again, after a lapse of years, become involved in her church, the United Church of Christ, in the field of adult education.

Due for a sabbatical leave from Wellesley, she decided to enroll at Andover Newton Theological School for the year to learn more about her religion. Halfway through the year, she had a personal religious experience that started her on a path of field education, parish calling, counseling and preaching that led to her eventual ordination. At the same time, she was doing clinical training in a Boston hospital, and later became a CPE supervisor.

DURING ONE of her four years as assistant minister at a Congregational church in Boston, she served on the staff of a black church, "A beautiful experience that put me in touch with the other side of the racial experience."

The Rev. Kanaly is proud of being a minister in the United Church of Christ, which has been ordaining women for more than 100 years. In her ministry, she has experienced no prejudice toward women.

A telephone call from Lutheran General's Division of Pastoral Care started the move that brought her to the Park Ridge hospital as a staff member Oct. 1, 1976. She is tremendously impressed by the hospital's deep commitment to the importance of the spiritual dimension in helping persons become healed.

WHAT TYPE OF woman is best suited for work as a chaplain? From her own experience, Marion believes it should be someone who is committed to the job, who likes to be with people, who has a solid grasp of her own personal theology, and who is able to work in an inter-disciplinary setting with other professionals. She must be able to allow people to project their stereotypes of religion on to her, for she will be dealing with persons of all religions, and agnostics and atheists as well.

The role of the chaplain, according to Pastor Kanaly, is to enable people to know they are important for who they are, that they have dignity and worth, are loved and cared for, ultimately an experience of God's love and care. Chaplain and patient interact, sharing the joys, sorrows, crises and celebrations of life.

"AS MORE WOMEN go into special ministries," said Marion Kanaly, "there will be an increasing awareness of what women can bring — intuition, the ability to be more comfortable with the patients and for patients to feel more comfortable with them."

"I think women are able to be content with 'being' rather than 'doing,'" she continued, "with listening, with just being present, especially to people in the crisis of illness."

Tomorrow: "It's great to be in the Army."

Straightening bell bottoms simple

Dear Eunice Farmer: I am a novice sewer, but willing to tackle simple tasks. I have some pants that have the bell-bottom shaping at the hems of the legs. I haven't noticed them anymore and want to know if I can straighten them myself rather than take them to a tailor. — Mrs. C.J.F.

Dear Mrs. C.J.F.: Ordinarily this is a simple alteration that almost anyone can do successfully. Simply turn the pants inside out, take a yardstick and mark a straight line from the knees to the hem — both the side seams and the inseams — and restitch your seams. If you wish them slightly wider, begin measuring from the hipline where there is slightly more width. Who knows — just this little alteration done well might get you started in this wonderful world of sewing.

At this time may I invite all of my readers to please sit down today and jot off any questions that you might have or any suggestions for sewing tips that might win the gold blazer buttons. I can't answer your letters personally, but I do read them and choose those of the most common interest for my column.

The doctor says

Pulse, blood pressure not always related

Please advise what correlation there is between the vital signs of blood pressure and pulse rate. If any. We know that normal blood pressure is 120 over 80 and the normal heart beat is around 72 per minute.

My questions are:

- If the pulse was much lower or higher would the blood pressure be affected and if so, how?
- If a person were having a heart attack would the blood pressure or pulse rate be affected, and if so, which one or both and how would they be affected?
- What vital signs would you look for if there is a suspicion of a heart attack and what are the differences from the norms in such a case?

I appreciate the reasons you ask these questions and I wish there were a good rule to follow, but there isn't.

Heart rate is affected by many things and so is blood pressure and often these are not the same things. So you can't make a correlation in a consistent way.

A well-trained athlete may have a slow heart rate and a normal blood pressure. A patient with very high blood pressure may have a slow heart rate — particularly if one of the medicines used to control his pressure has a direct effect on heart rate.

I have had patients come in with a heart attack with severe high blood pressure. The pain triggers a reflex action that causes the rise even though the person may have had normal blood pressure before the attack. The next patient may be in shock from his heart attack and the blood pressure will be quite low.

EITHER ONE of these examples may have a slow or fast heart rate. Some patients have marked slowing of the heart rate from reflex actions and we have to give these patients medicines that counteract the slow heart beat — sometimes as a lifesaving procedure. The next patient may have a rapid heart rate so each case is individual and has to be treated accordingly.

Finally, to make things more complicated, at least a third of the heart attacks occur without symptoms or with symptoms so mild the individual never knew he had anything seriously wrong with him. We find these cases with electrocardiograms done for periodic physical examinations or at post mortem examinations after the patient dies for any of a variety of reasons.

So there is no specific information you can derive from the heart rate or blood pressure that will tell you if a person is having a heart attack or not. The history remains the most important aspect for the public and the physician. I am sending you The Health Letter number 2-10, Heart Attack, Myocardial Infarction, Angina Pectoris, to give you information on what to look for. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped self-addressed envelope for it.

Should one eat brown sugar instead of white sugar?

If you like it. It is brown because it has not quite completed the refining process. The additional amount of minerals or other substances in it that you don't find in white sugar is so small as to be unimportant from a health point of view.

Because of the volume of mail Dr. Lamb cannot answer your letters personally but he will answer representative letters of general interest in his column. Write to him in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Cut morning glories to save vegetables

Dear Dorothy: Every spring, morning glories take over my garden. How can I kill them and still have the ground plantable? I've tried gasoline. It didn't work, and I was told it should have been put on very early in the spring. I have a vegetable garden and don't want to ruin the ground. — Mrs. Homer Jones Gasoline can ruin soil temporarily. There are herbicides which kill broad-leaved plants, but one has to be careful because they can damage nearby plants. The best and simplest way is to rip out the morning glories or cut off the tops. The goal is to prevent them from dropping seed — so you can rip out, cut off at ground level or cut off at flower level.

Dear Dorothy: Let natural sunshine steep iced tea. Simply fill a clear glass pitcher with cold water, add tea bags and cover with plastic wrap. Put in the sun for a few hours and voila! wonderful, clear iced tea in the refrigerator, ready to drink at any time — and will never turn cloudy! It's so easy I'm continually surprised so few people know about it. — Jeanne Eodell

Dear Dorothy: Tell Anna Laura Smith who got heavy creases in 100 per cent polyester slacks by drying them in too hot a dryer to try this method: Go over the creases with a cloth dampened in white vinegar, then press with a team iron. The creases will come out. — Ella Nelson rounded ends, cut the shape of the pocket out of lightweight cardboard. Use this to shape the pocket when pressing in the curve and seam allowance. Both pockets will be identical in this way."

Dear Dorothy: After some workmen left we noticed they had also left scratches on our vinyl tile floor. How to get them out? — Terry Hornsby

Try rubbing the scratches gently with 0000 steel wool — gently meaning just that, or you risk rubbing the pattern out.

Dear Eunice Farmer: I always read your column and find it more than helpful — it's inspirational! Recently I saw a coat of Ultra Suede for about $400. It seemed that I could duplicate it. I found some fine quality suede fabric, but my problem is the seams. What size needles and thread would you suggest for stitching the seams like the readymade garments? — Mrs. E.D.P.

Dear Mrs. E.D.P.: You can duplicate these garments with great success, provided you understand the construction, which is very different from the way you handle regular fabric. I would recommend two very fine booklets on all the details of working with Ultra Suede. They are $3.50 each (and well worth every penny). One is by Kristine Corbin, the other by Pati Palmer and Susan Pleisch. If you can't find them in your area, I would be glad to send you a copy if you write me.

As for needles and thread, always use a fine needle, not ballpoint and certainly not a leather needle. Use regular thread; I prefer the long staple imported Swiss polyester thread for all stitching, including the top stitching. You would never use buttonhole twist even for the top stitching.

These garments are quite a challenge and can be made for about one-third the cost of the readymade garments. Ultra Suede varies in price slightly depending on where you live, but it normally retails for approximately $35 per yard. If your fabric is much less, it is not Ultra Suede and the look and construction would be different.

Eunice Farmer's "Twenty Questions" booklet answers many of the most common questions asked by readers of "Sew Simple." For your copy, send 25 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Eunice Farmer, Box 4994.

Dear Eunice Farmer: I love your column and try to follow it faithfully. Regarding knits, you have always told us to cut our knits on the lengthwise grain and cut all pieces of our pattern in one direction.

In ready-to-wear this season, I have seen so many border knits that are so attractive. However, if we want to copy them, we will have to cut the knit on the cross grain. How will this hold up and would you recommend it? — Helen R.B.

Dear Helen: There are exceptions to every rule; in this case, the design makes the exception. I think you will also find that the type of knit for these border prints is more stabilized than any other type. There is practically no give in either direction, so they would not pull out of shape.

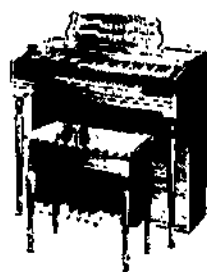

I think everyone should play with these lovely bordered fabrics. They can be so attractive as well as a real challenge. You can use your borders for the sleeves, the hemline, the yokes and collars. Also, they can be cut with the border running lengthwise for bands of trim on shirt-dresses. It all depends on the border, but this is surely the year for them, so don't shy away.

Diane Mermigas

Chicago family's life documented

A Chicago family of six children, the bread-winner of which is a dispatcher for the city's sanitation department, is the focus of a real-life television drama.

Better than a script, the drama takes scenes from American family life. Viewers will find a little bit of themselves and their families in them.

Stanley and Lorraine Pasclak and clan live in Brighton Park, a predominantly Polish neighborhood on the Southwest Side of Chicago. They will be the first family profiled for a new weekly show on WTTW, Channel 11, "Six American Families," which premieres today at 9 p.m.

Writer and host of the program, Paul Wilkes, plans to focus on the family lives of an Iowa farmer, New Mexico chemical engineer, New York policeman, San Francisco lawyer and unemployed Appalachian in the one-hour episodes to follow.

WILKES, 38, a noted author and newspaper writer, calls the families "typical." The one that Northwest suburbanites and Chicagoans will find themselves relating to the most, however, are the Pasclaks.

The family represents the classic American conflicts — ethnic traditions versus contemporary trends, the elders versus the youngsters and old values versus the new.

Stanley Pasclak is a husky, quiet man who yields to his wife in almost all conversations. One of his favorite spots is the kitchen, where he sits at the table sipping coffee, listening to the radio and reading the newspaper.

As in many homes, the kitchen table is the focal point where good news and bad news is told, where the family shares and argues.

Lorraine Pasclak works nights as a cleaning woman to help pay for her sons' college tuition. She fills the broad maternal role of knowing what's best for her children, regardless of their ages, and scolds them when they are wrong.

The Pasclaks view their bread-winning as a duty. They believe they were destined to raise a large family, to be sure their children marry well and settle down to a good family life. Like many parents, they are afraid when their children deviate from the norm.

THEIR OLDEST SON, Gary, 22, has done just that, however. He has moved to Hollywood with dreams of becoming an actor. He finds the confining nature of the family repulsive, but he has a strong attachment to his kid sister and a hidden, unexpressed love for his parents.

Much to the parents' dismay, a second son, who enjoys rock music and plays bass guitar, is headed in the same direction. The rest of the children, except for an older, married daughter, are still growing up under mother's constant care.

The family was filmed at home, at their jobs, at play, with their friends and at church during the Christmas holidays.

Relatives and friends gather on Christmas Eve at the Pasclak house for a night of food and Polish tradition, but the teen-agers excuse themselves from the "drab goings on" and the adults wonder whether the traditions will die with them.

The traditions are the very soul of families like the Pasclaks and the ethnic neighborhoods where they live. The parents urge their children to stay home, but the children eventually leave to wander and explore. In the process, hearts are broken and family bonds lax.

You may find yourself identifying with the family. If you do, consider yourself lucky. In television

The Pasclaks, one of "Six American Families"

"escape" world, it's not often the viewer can see his life on film.

"Six American Families" is well edited, well-produced and hard-hitting. If you can stand to, take a look at yourself tonight. Learn and enjoy.

Baseball '77: Opening week is here

by FRED DOWN

NEW YORK (UPI)—Get lost, Bowie and Charlie, it's time to play baseball. Weary of the endless squabbles between the imperial commissioner (Bowie Kuhn) and the maverick owner (Charlie Finley), bored by the cry-baby moans of players with six-figure salaries and fed up with the politics of sports in general, baseball fans turn this week to the playing fields hoping to hear only the sounds of the bat, the glove and the ball.

Intriguing questions await answers during the 1977 season:

—How was the balance of power in both the National and American Leagues affected by the re-entry draft circus?

—Can the Cincinnati Reds become the first National League team ever to win three consecutive World Series?

—Can the talent-rich but temperamental New York Yankees survive themselves and reestablish the dynasty that ruled baseball from 1921 through 1964?

—How will the establishment of expansion teams in Toronto and Seattle affect the American League competitively and financially?

THE ANSWERS will begin to unfold on Wednesday when the two-time world champion Reds start their quest for No. 3 against the San Diego Padres in the NL's Cincinnati and the Mariners bring major league baseball back to Seattle when they oppose the California Angels in the AL opener.

On Thursday it will be St. Louis at Pittsburgh, New York at Chicago and San Francisco at Los Angeles in the NL and Kansas City at Detroit, Chicago at Toronto, Texas at Baltimore, Milwaukee at New York and Cleveland at Boston in the AL.

Atlanta will be at Houston in an NL opener on Friday with Montreal at Philadelphia (NL) and Minnesota at Oakland (AL) rounding out the opening-day extravaganzas on Saturday.

The new managers are Tom LaSorda in Los Angeles, Herman Franks in Chicago, Dick Williams in Montreal, Vern Rapp in St. Louis, Chuck Tanner in Pittsburgh and Joe Altobelli in San Francisco in the NL. The new AL managers are Bob Lemon in Chicago, Jack McKeon in Oakland and, of course, Roy Hartsfield in Toronto and Darrell Johnson in Seattle.

THE RE-ENTRY draft involved more than 20 outstanding players and may lead to surprising changes in the balance of power in both leagues. When the draft ended it appeared that the Yankees had created an invincible team, that the Angels had established themselves as co-favorites in the AL West and that the Padres, who acquired two former Oakland stars, could be factors in the NL West.

The Yankees, making good on George Steinbrenner's pledge that they "would try to outbid anyone, anytime, any place," signed pitcher

Proud Fremd has good memories

by JEFF NORDLUND

NORMAL, Ill. — The first Illinois state basketball tournament for girls is history.

For third-place Fremd, the memories are many and varied and, not surprisingly, they are good, very good.

Falling to eventual state champ Sterling, 69-57, here Saturday afternoon in the semifinals, the Vikings came back in the evening to beat Centralia, 56-50, for the third-place trophy.

THE GIRLS BROUGHT back a collection of impressions and possessions, including the trophy awarded to senior co-captains Cindy Nelson and Colleen Cannon which will be displayed at the school.

"We're very proud of finishing third in the state," starting center Peggy Hamill said Saturday. "I think I'll remember best that this was the first state tournament ever."

"I'm extremely pleased with the girls," Coach Carol Plodzien added. "I can't say enough for these kids. It's been great this season. There have been good moments and some bad ones. Now we'll try and make next year better."

All the girls were also awarded medallions which they wore proudly about their necks.

"THE MEDALS are what we'll treasure best," starting guard Connie Bruns said, wearing hers with the same pride an Olympian would.

"The girls are taught in team sports individuals aren't awarded unless it's by being named all-conference," Plodzien said. "So, these medals add up to an awful lot."

Despite the setback in the afternoon against Sterling, the Vikings returned to the floor for the third-place game against Centralia with the same intensity as in previous games.

"We went into the game thinking we were playing for third place in the state, not a consolation game," Hamill said later. "There's a difference."

AFTER CENTRALIA scored 15

straight points through the second and third quarters to take a 32-27 lead, Fremd staged another of its now-typical second-half rallies to win.

Junior forward Donelda Danz led Fremd with 14 points, while senior guards Bruns and Cannon had 13 apiece.

The same trio of Vikings were chosen among the wire services' all-tournament teams. In the Associated Press poll, Bruns and Danz were named to the first team, while Bruns and Cannon were chosen among the second team players by the United Press International.

In the afternoon game, a second-half rally fell short against powerful Sterling.

FREM D TRAILED by as much as 17 points in the second quarter of its semifinal match, but rallied to shrink Sterling's edge to as little as 45-39 with 2:21 left in the third period.

Sterling refused to fold, though, and led by the rebounding and scoring of Fran Smith, and the ball-handling of Marche Harris, the Golden Warriors (21-0) repeatedly broke Fremd's press for lay-ups.

Smith and Harris were named to the first teams of both wire services after the Fremd game, proving the choices to be wise ones when the pair led Sterling to its 52-38 victory over Washington in the championship game.

Though Sterling coach Sue Strong said the Fremd game was not her team's toughest of the season, she said the squad had something to prove.

"We came out and showed Fremd we're not the slow team they thought we were," Strong said. "We have five fine players."

"BUT WE'RE happy just to be down here. We've been among the 'Sweet 16,' the 'Elite Eight,' the 'Fantastic Four' and now the 'Terrific Two,'" she added, not realizing a few hours later her team would be the "Only One."

Second-place Washington showed little disappointment after the championship game.

"We feel as though we really did something," guard Jane Grebner said.

"We're just happy to be here," teammate Nancy Roth said. "No one thought we'd even get to the sectionals."

"It's been a great experience," added Coach Jan Smith.

FREM D'S THIRD-PLACE Vikings were given a heroes' welcome Sunday afternoon in Palatine. Team members are Mary Harring, Anne Moffett, Rosemary Carroll, Connie Kling, Kim Place, Sue Mischler, Nelson and Katie O'Donnell, as well as starters Bruns, Cannon, Danz, Hamill and Kathy Pfander.

The 22-2 Vikings will disband now. But what's going to happen to the girls? How does the future look?

"We're all going to grow about two more inches over the summer," Hamill said with a smile.

Kansas City falls to Cleveland Cavs

Bobby Smith topped the Cavs with 22 points while Richard Washington hit a career high 30 points for the Kings.

Edwards, a 155-pounder from Edmond, Okla., had rounds of 68-68-68-72 to finish at 12-under-par 276.

Edwards, who had won $25,901 on the tour this year, claimed a $47,000 winner's check. With the win, the three-year tour pro became the fifth pro to get his first win in the 12 tournaments played so far this year.

Krukow, 7-9 with Wichita of the American Association last season, scored the only run Chicago needed when he singled in the third inning off Giant loser John Montefusco and scored on a triple by Ivan DeJesus.

Three straight titles?

Survey tabs Reds again

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Cincinnati Reds have been selected in the UPI's annual preseason baseball survey to become the first National League team ever to win three consecutive World Series.

The Reds were the choice of 16 of the 21 writers who filled the UPI panel of experts to win the National League's Western Division title and of nine to go on to win the World Series. The 1936-39 and 1940-43 New York Yankees and the 1972-74 Oakland A's are the only teams which won three or more consecutive Series.

The Yankees were an overwhelming pick to win the American League's Eastern Division title and were chosen as World Series winners by five experts. The Philadelphia Phillies and Los Angeles Dodgers got two votes each to win the Series and the Boston Red Sox, Pittsburgh Pirates and Montreal Expos received one each.

The order of finish predicted in each division:

National League East — 1, Phillies, 2, Pirates, 3, Mets, 4, Cardinals, 5, Expos, 6, Cubs.

National League West — 1, Reds, 2, Dodgers, 3, Padres, 4, Astros, 5, Braves, 6, Giants.

American League East — 1, Yankees, 2, Red Sox, 3, Indians, 4, Orioles, 5, Tigers, 6, Brewers, 7, Blue Jays.

American League West — 1, Royals.

2, Angels, 3, Rangers, 4, Twins, 5, A's, 6, White Sox, 7, Mariners.

The experts saw the National League teams in both divisions lining up pretty much the same as in 1976. They predicted that the Phillies and Pirates would easily out-distance the other four teams in the Eastern Division with the Phillies winding up in first place. They felt the Reds would win handily in the Western Division.

The Yankees were an overwhelming choice in the American League's Eastern Division but the experts predicted a three-team struggle among the Royals, Angels and Rangers in the West with the defending champion Royals prevailing.

The expansion Blue Jays and Mariners were assigned to the division cellars although one expert predicted that the Mariners would beat out the White Sox for sixth place in the Western Division.

Table of votes in UPI's poll of baseball writers on the probable order of finish in the 1977 major league baseball races:

Obstacles block 3rd Reds crown

by RICK VAN SANT

CINCINNATI (UPI) — The Cincinnati Reds in 1977 will try to become the only National League team to win three straight World Series, but there are some key differences between this year's club and the championship teams of 1955-56.

Don Gullett, the craftsman ace of the pitching staff, is gone.

Tony Perez, the popular, clutch-hitting RBI strongman, has departed.

PETE ROSE, the spirited, hustling, rah-rah guy, is unhappy. This could be his last season in Cincinnati.

Gullett, the young left-hander who manager Sparky Anderson says is headed for the Hall of Fame, left the Reds for the New York Yankees after playing out his option and becoming a "free" man.

The replacement for Gullett is veteran Woodie Fryman, who will be 37 years old April 12. Fryman hasn't had a winning record since 1972, but he was 13-13 with Montreal last year and Reds' optimists point out that with potent Reds hitters providing him more runs, Woodie should be a winner here.

The optimists also point out that the 37-year old doesn't have worry about trying to go nine innings every time he starts. Anderson is known as "Captain Hood" for often yanking starters in favor of relievers, so Fryman need only work about six innings while the hitters build a lead. Or so the theory goes.

JUST AS FRYMAN was brought in from Montreal to close the Gullett gap, the trade also opened a new one, as Perez was dealt away in the deal. But the departure of Perez has been carefully thought out by Honsam, who is counting on 25-year old Danny Driessen to make Reds fans quit crying about the absence of Perez, who will be 35 years old May 14.

Driessen was a good hitter when he played regularly in the past, but his fielding was so poor it made him more of a liability than an asset.

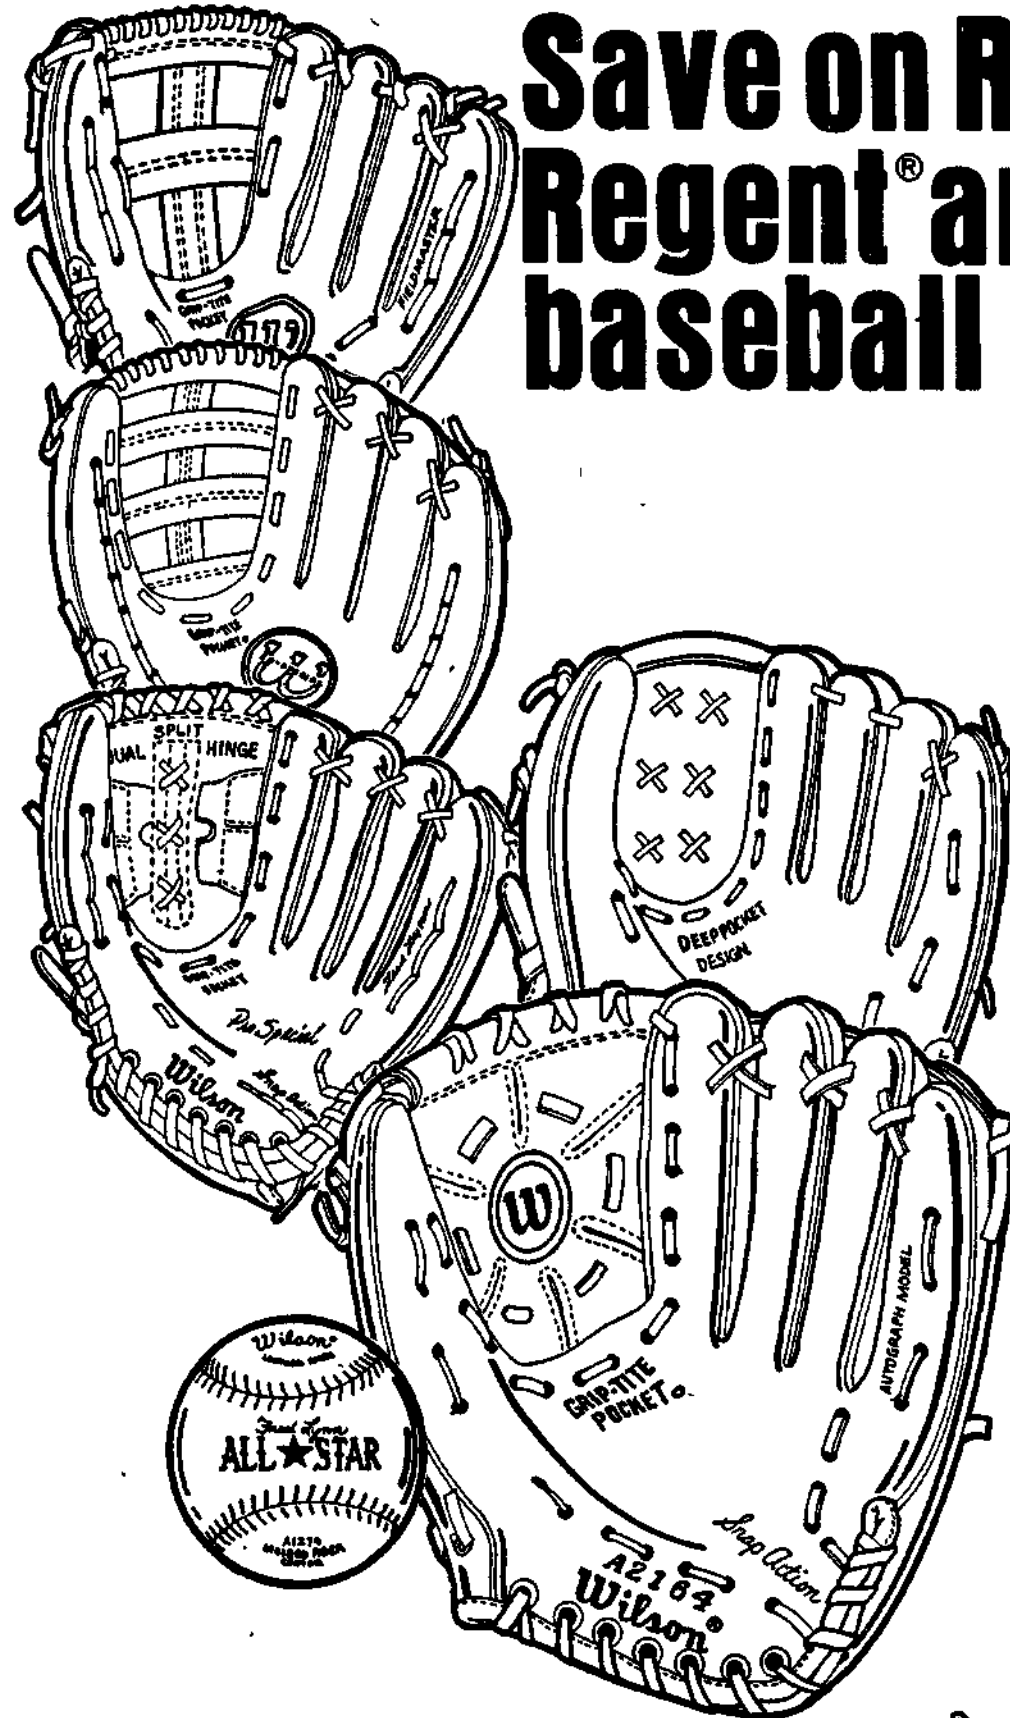

But Driessen's "natural" position is said to be first base, so he should be adequate there. This will put him in the starting lineup every day, where he will be able to deliver as many clutch hits, and probably hit more consistently, than Perez. Or so the theory goes.

Because of Rose's salary squabble — the Reds say they won't meet a $400,000 a year demand which reportedly will go even higher once the season begins — Pete is a bit of a question mark for the first time in his 14-year major league career.

ANOTHER RED unhappy about money is Rawly Eastwick, who, like Rose, could be in a different uniform in 1978, but the ace relief pitcher remains confident about 1977 in a Cincy uniform.

Eastwick, who likes to play mind games, said to Reds' fans earlier this year, "I've already got a third straight world championship locked in my mind, so don't worry."

Or so the theory goes.

Baseball '77: It's here

Don Gullett and slugger Reggie Jackson to multi-million-dollar, long-term contracts. It's a long trip from April to October but the Yankees start the 1977 season with an apparent superiority over their rivals matched only by some of their greatest teams of the past.

Gene Autry, determined to shed his image as a "baseball loser," more than matched the Yankees in the re-entry circus by acquiring infielder Bobby Grich and outfielders Don Baylor and Joe Rudi. With Frank Tanana and Nolan Ryan heading their pitching staff, the Angels seem capable of making Autry's dream of a pennant a reality.

THE PADRES, with Ray Kroc jumping at the chance to transform his club into a contender, signed Rollie Fingers and Gene Tenace — both key men in the A's five consecutive division titles and three straight World Series triumphs.

In some of the other big deals resulting from the re-entry draft, the Rangers acquired Doyle Alexander (Yankees) and shortstop Bert Campaneris (A's), the Brewers obtained Sal Brando (A's), the Expos picked up Dave Cash (Phillies), the Red Sox came to terms with Bill Campbell (Twins), the Indians took Wayne Garland, the A's signed Dick Allen (Phillies), the Phillies acquired Rich Hebner (Pittsburgh) and the Braves signed Gary Matthews (Giants).

The Reds suffered the loss of Gullett, their best pitcher, and had trouble signing some of their stars but are still solid favorites in the NL West. They can anticipate a strong challenge from the Dodgers, for at least part of the season, however, and some experts feel the Padres and Braves will be contenders. Considering those factors and the rapid development of the Astros' young pitching staff, the Reds probably will encounter more formidable opposition in their division than in the last two years.

WHAT HAPPENED in the distant past has no direct effect on the present but history warns that even great teams experience off-seasons. No NL team has won three straight pennants since the 1942-43-44 Cardinals and it could be that the question Manager Sparky Anderson will be asking most next October will be, "What happened?"

The two teams have enough talent to put two good teams on the field from their roster of 25. The Red Sox and Indians appear to be standard contenders but their chief hope is that internal pressures — of which there are many — will prevent the Yankees from playing up to their capabilities.

The new teams in Toronto and Seattle haven't even played their first games and already there is talk of further expansion and/or franchise movement. The structure of the game is going through fundamental changes and it is anyone's guess how the re-entry draft combined with ever-higher player salaries and franchise realignment will affect the game's relationship with its fans.

For a while at least, however, the fans wish — to resurrect the words of an old cigarette ad — that baseball will give them a treat instead of a treatment.

Cards rule badminton again but league shows gains

A HAPPY first singles champ, Libby Iturralde accepts congratulations after defeating Jody Lyon for the first singles badminton crown. Lyon, defeated in 12 regular season matches and three conference meet matches, fell to Miss Iturralde, 11-5, 11-8.

For the fourth year in a row, Arlington is badminton champion of the Mid-Suburban League, but for the first time, ever, the Cards are looking over their shoulders.

Don't look now, but the rest of the league is gaining.

Arlington has easily won the MSL crown in every year since the League started badminton, but for the first time Saturday, didn't win all seven positions.

EVEN JODY Lyon, Arlington's premier first singles player was upset by second-seeded Libby Iturralde of Rolling Meadows in one of the more emotional matches of the afternoon.

Lyon and Iturralde both easily won their semifinal matches earlier in the day but it was Iturralde who prevailed in just two games over Lyon in the finals, 11-5, 11-8.

Leslie Grabitz won the second singles title over Dawn Wiebe of Rolling Meadows. Grabitz, another top seeded player from Arlington, put away Wiebe in straight games, 11-1, 11-1.

Arlington had virtually locked up the MSL title on Friday night in the preliminaries so the action Saturday centered around the battle for the runnerup spot, which was claimed by Rolling Meadows, which ran up 75 points to edge out third place Palatine. Arlington easily outdistanced the whole field with 106 points.

In third singles, top seeded Jo Obrycki of Forest View notched the title in a tough match over number two seeded Peggy Munson of Palatine. The match went all three games with Obrycki prevailing, 11-4, 5-11, 11-4.

In doubles competition, where Arlington won all four levels, the favored Card team of Janet Haberkorn and Karen Zobel triumphed over a surprising team from Schaumburg of Kathy Svoboda and Lois Wisniewski, 15-3, 15-1. The third seeded Svoboda-Wisniewski team had beaten the second seeded Forest View team to make it into the final match.

The top seeded Arlington team of Lisa Fugsley and Kris Richey easily took the second doubles title over Marianne Patch and Tina Fallahee of Palatine, 15-4, 5-2.

KATHY GOLDEN and Janet Ackerman of Arlington copped the third doubles competition Saturday in straight games over the upstart pair of Nancy Borre and Michelle Frank of Hersey, 15-4, 15-6. The unranked and underdog pair from Hersey had upset the third seeded team of Tracy Snow and Nadine Stocking from Prospect Friday, then topped the second seeded Rolling Meadows team of Donna Frelac and Darlene Petrucci from Rolling Meadows, 15-15, 15-9, Saturday to earn their way into the championship match.

Judy Haberkorn and Gina Weber of Arlington won the fourth doubles title in straight games over Sue Guenther and Debbie Boe of Palatine, 15-2, 15-8.

THE CHAMP. Miss Iturralde of Rolling Meadows shows the form that earned her the Mid-Suburban League first singles badminton title Saturday over top-seeded Lyon of Arlington.

Harper moves track act outdoors; Nolan satisfied

Harper Junior College took its track act outdoors Saturday at the Wheaton Relays and head coach Bob Nolan learned what's in store for him and his Hawks this year.

While no team scores were kept, Nolan figured his Harper runners would have finished about fourth in a mixed field of nine junior and senior colleges that included Illinois Benedictine, North Park, DuPage and Wright.

"It was a pretty low-key meet," said Nolan, whose team didn't get too excited about the indoor season either. "But it was good to get outdoors and I saw some encouraging things."

AMONG THE TOP Harper performances was a strong showing from sophomore weight man Bob Roels, a former Rolling Meadows High athlete. Roels was third in the shot put (44-6) and second in his specialty, the discus, with a 137-6 effort into a rippling wind.

"The wind was really turning the disc over," Nolan said. "But it looks like Roels is a little bit ahead of where he was last year at this time."

Roels qualified for the NJCAA nationals in the discus last season.

The Hawks' only victory came in the high jump where Mike Nichol reached 6-4 despite the wind. The former Cary-Grove standout in both track and basketball was an indoor qualifier for the nationals this year with a season-best of 6-6.

Harper got a fifth place from long jumper George McCahey (19-7), a third from intermediate hurdler Jim Lemke, a fifth from three-miler Tim Blechl, and a second place from distance medley relay runners John Fabbrini, Paul Rizzo, Wil Fieldhouse and Blechl.

"WE NEED A lot more work on the track," said Nolan. "With a good week of weather we should be able to go down to St. Louis next Saturday and do well."

The Hawks are entered in the Florissant Valley Invitational Apr. 9.

"We don't have a very big team this year," Nolan added. "We don't have quite as many kids out this year, but I think we have some people who can score points."

McKee paces Stevenson to outdoor track win

Gary McKee won three individual events and finished second in another as Stevenson High School's track team captured its first outdoor dual meet of the season, a 92-49 pasting of host Niles East Saturday.

McKee set Stevenson records in the long jump (21-8½) and the triple jump (43-2¼) before rattling off a 23.7 to win the 220-yard dash. He was nosed out in the 100 despite clocking a 10.55.

"Gary was really psyched up for this meet," said Patriot coach Fred Cremer. "He hadn't been doing too well lately."

McKee's MARKS in the long and triple jumps were wind-aided, although Cremer didn't think Saturday's gale made all that much difference.

"Gary's really coming along fine now," the coach said.

Stevenson took 13 firsts in the meet, including a sweep of the relay events.

Dan Anderson won the shot put (49-2¼) and the discus (125-8), and Pat Grace took firsts in both the 120-high hurdles (18.6) and the 330-lows (42.3).

Other winners were Dave Rock in the 880 (2:12.2) and Randy Anderson in the high jump (5-6).

Freshman Greg Howell, who was pressed into varsity service because of the absence of a pair of key Stevenson runners, contributed to the Pats' 440-relay victory (46.7) and also won the pole vault with an 8-0 effort.

HOWELL JOINED Bob Talamine, Jack Lange and John Touhy in the sprint relay victory. In the two-mile relay Mike Voland, Brad Swaback, Bret Roggendorf and Rock ran 9:16; and in the mile relay Lange and Grace teamed up with Marty Holmes and Ron Greenberg to win in 3:57.8.

Niles East won on the lower level, 71-65.

Win at bridge

Ace is a heart-blocker

Oswald: "Almost any bridge player should play a low heart from dummy at trick one. East would win the trick with the queen and lead back the nine. It wouldn't matter what South did. West would get the rest of his heart suit established. South would lose the diamond finesse and the defense could collect five tricks."

Jim: "This hand is taken from a little book by Terence Reese of England and Roger Trezel of France that gives 42 examples of blocking and unblocking plays. They point out that if South goes up with dummy's ace of hearts at trick one he can lose the diamond finesse with impunity. The heart suit will block and South will have three spades, one heart, three diamonds and two clubs for a nice nine-trick total."

Oswald: "South has no worries if hearts break 4-3. If they break 5-2, the ace play loses if West has led from king-queen. But as Reese and Trezel point out, the odds that West led from just one top honor are substantial and winning players go with the odds."

Ask Andy

Great Wall in China started in 214 B.C.

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1977 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Dennis Waterman, 12, of Indianapolis, Ind., for his question:

HOW LONG DID IT TAKE TO BUILD THE GREAT WALL IN CHINA?

Since the start of time, it seems, man has built fortresses to protect himself and his family. Walled cities are found in all parts of the world. Many ancient civilizations saw this means of construction as the best method of keeping an enemy away. Unfortunately, it didn't usually work out this way.

Most famous of all the protective walls is the one found in China, called the Great Wall. Its size almost is unbelievable: it stretches for 1,500 miles, winding across north China from Kansu province on the Yellow Sea to Chinwangtao in Hopei province.

Running along the southern edge of the Mongolian plain, the wall was built to protect the Chinese people from northern barbarians. It actually is an amalgamation of many walls that were built over a long period of time in ancient days.

Construction started in 214 B.C. when Shih Huang Ti decided to build the grand barrier. Laborers were brought from all over China to work on the project, and many died on the job.

The wall's present form dates mainly from the Ming dynasty which ran between 1368 to 1644 A.D. At this time many of the shorter sections were joined and the full ribbon was completed.

The gigantic wall averages about 25 feet in height. Thickness varies from between 15 and 30 feet, with much of the length measuring about 25 feet thick. The wall slopes from the base and is about 12 feet wide at the top.

Guard stations and watchtowers are placed at regular intervals. The eastern part of the wall is made of earth with stone and brick facing, but in the west it is only an earth mound.

During the many years, China had successive invasions from the north and it was demonstrated that the Great Wall had very little military use. It was too easy for the enemy to get over the protective barrier.

Much of the wall has fallen into ruin with disuse. Since 1949, however, a section to the north of Peking has been reconstructed and is open to visitors. Almost all visitors to China these days include a side trip to the Great Wall, since it is such a remarkable engineering monument.

Andy sends a Student Globe to Bobby Lee Padgett II, 10, of Gastonia, N. C., for his question:

IS THE BALD EAGLE REALLY BALD?

National emblem of the United States is the bald eagle, a bird that stands for freedom and courage because it can soar to great heights.

Dark brown feathers cover the young bald eagle, and it takes from three to four years for them to grow white head and tail feathers. Contrasting with the dark blackish-brown feathers of its body, the adult is given a bald look. But it's definitely not bald.

Male bald eagles measure about 30 inches in length, with females being a bit larger. Their nests are deep — one being measured 29 feet deep, with many found to be 10 feet deep.

Only Rausch approves

Hopefuls 'wait' on Harper plan

by DICK DAHL

Only one of five Harper Board of Trustees candidates voiced approval of a second campus at a recent candidates' meeting.

The lone advocate of the plan was Robert Rausch, one of three incumbents seeking reelection to the board. He was the only incumbent to attend the Wednesday night candidates' meeting at Plum Grove Junior High School, Rolling Meadows.

The other incumbents, William Kelly, Arlington Heights, and Judith Troehrer, Mount Prospect, did not attend and did not submit statements.

Rausch, of Hoffman Estates, said long-range projections show the district's population will more than double by the year 2000 and that planning for expansion should be done on that basis.

"IT IS THE HEIGHT of irresponsibility to wait until the crisis has come before the solutions are launched," Rausch said.

The other four candidates at the meeting, all newcomers, did not share Rausch's enthusiasm, however.

David Tomchek, Barrington, pointed to projections of a shrinking number of 18- to 20-year-olds the next 10 years and criticized the college's "vigorous marketing approach" for creating "false demand."

"There quite likely will be an actual decline in enrollment," he said. Expanding to a second campus may demonstrate "an unresponsiveness to community demands," Tomchek said.

JANET BONE, Palatine, said in a statement she urges caution in planning for the second campus.

Factors bearing on making a commitment toward a second campus, she said, are:

- Declining enrollments in feeder schools.

- Roosevelt University's leasing of an Arlington Heights junior high school in fall, 1978.

- The Dist. 59 unit district election April 9 and the possible "domino effect" a new unit and the breakup of Township High School Dist. 214 may have on school patterns.

- The state formula which allocates square feet of construction on the basis of full-time day students on the main campus.

"Within six months to a year we'll know more about the impact of the unit district, we'll know more about the economy," she said. "We'll see if Harper enrollment projections are correct."

Dean Anderson, Wheeling, said if enrollment is to increase, the second campus is only one of three alternatives.

The other options, he said, are increased facilities at the Palatine campus and an expanded system of "satellite" classes.

THE KEY, Anderson said, is an accurate enrollment projection. He said he endorses the work on a new master plan the board approved in February. Joan Klusmann, Arlington Heights, also proposed Harper delay planning for the second campus.

"It's a time for study," she said. "It's not time to spend a great deal of money for an expensive plan."

"Enrollments have gone down (at Harper) this year. We should wait."

About 40 persons attended the meeting, which was sponsored by the Palatine League of Women Voters and the Northwest Suburban Council of PTAs and PTSAs.

Thoughts on a mattress
A one act play

Place: Someone's Bedroom.
Time: 11:30 P.M.
Mabel: John, are you awake?
John: Naturally I'm awake. Who could sleep on this mattress?
Mabel: It's only six years old and they told us it should last 15 or 20 years.
John: They meant that's how much older we would get if we slept on it for six years.
Mabel: It was their best mattress. It is supposed to have over 800 coils in it.
John: I know - I can feel every one of them poking me in the side.
Mabel: We should go to the Schaumburg Mattress Factory. They make a beautiful mattress - it has the cutest shaped coils in it.
John: How do you know so much about them?
Mabel: I was there with Marge last month. She says their new mattress is fantastic. Why don't you go right now?
John: Are you crazy? It's almost midnight!
Mabel: Then where are you going?
John: I'm going to sleep on the sofa.
Mabel: Oh no you don't. You had the sofa last night. You can sleep on the floor tonight!

Carter energy plan pinches all

WASHINGTON (UPI) — From hints and trial balloons, testimony and tactics, the outlines of President Carter's energy legislation can be seen fairly clearly three weeks before he sends it to Congress.

Carter has said his program will pinch everyone a little, and it may put a dent in his popularity.

White House energy chief James Schlesinger calls it "the moral equivalent of war," and effort requiring united national effort.

SOURCES IN the Capital and energy agencies say the program will include:

- Gasoline. An increase in the federal tax to get people to use less. Carter spokesmen deny he was considering a one-shot increase of 25 cents per gallon, but sources say he may propose 5-cent increases for each of five years, with at least some of the money going to states for energy conservation programs.

- Automobiles. A surcharge on cars that get low gas mileage, perhaps adding up to $500 to the sticker price of the worst gas-guzzlers. Some argue the idea would let the rich choose any car and force the poor into a limited choice.

- Natural gas. An easing of federal price controls on newly discovered natural gas, with some extension of federal controls to gas produced and sold within the same state. Another possibility is a selective pricing system that discourages wasteful use of gas. Carter also is considering a prohibition against use of natural gas where other fuels can be used, such as for industrial and utility steam boilers.

- Oil. Pricing policy about as it is now, with controlled prices that can increase substantially each year and with an end to controls in 1979.

- Coal. A goal of almost doubling production to about one billion tons a year by 1985, coupled with an easier system for forcing utilities and industries to switch from oil and gas to coal. There is authority in present law for required conversions, but they go slowly and that power expires June 30. Carter also may recommend easing clean-air restrictions on use of coal.

- Atomic power. Carter calls nuclear power the lowest priority energy item, but he probably will try to speed up slightly the construction of conventional atomic power plants with improved safeguards. It is believed he

Firms unsure Superblock plan will succeed

by SCOTT FOSDICK

Downtown merchants are not sure the Superblock complex will succeed. They say the parking meters may discourage shoppers and they call the parking deck an ugly monstrosity.

But the merchants know downtown Des Plaines has its problems. And despite their uncertainty about Superblock and three other improvements, they are hopeful the project will be a boon to business. They already are looking forward to the increased business the development may bring.

"We'll lose a few sales to competition over there, but we'll more than make up for it with increased traffic," Bruce Espy said, summing up the way most area businessmen feel. Espy is co-owner of The La Salle Fashions, a men's and women's clothing store at 688 Lee St.

THE $15 MILLION Superblock project is being built on Center and Ellinwood streets by J. R. Gottlieb & Associates, Chicago, and Erickson & Stevens, a Des Plaines architectural firm.

The 10-story First National Bank office building opened in January, although the bank, its main tenant, hasn't moved in yet. Mel Helms, vice president of J. R. Gottlieb, said 40 per cent of the building has been leased.

The city last year built the four-deck, $1.2 million Herbert H. Behrel Parking Plaza on Ellinwood Street to serve Superblock's future needs.

But the ground still has to be broken for the major part of Superblock, a three-story enclosed shopping mall. Helms said construction of the mall will not start until October, and it probably will not be completed until fall 1978.

Spiegler's Department store is the only confirmed tenant so far, Helms said. Spiegler's will occupy about 22,000 square feet on all three floors. J. R. Gottlieb is negotiating with other businesses for another 30,000 square feet in the mall.

SMALLER businessmen surrounding Superblock are not afraid of competition from the structure. Many believe Superblock will draw the shoppers, and the small stores will get business.

"They'll shop over there and say, 'We didn't get what we wanted here, let's go across the street,'" Espy said.

"There's already more people coming down to shop. We can already see business increasing," he said.

Espy is convinced J. R. Gottlieb & Associates will have no trouble renting the rest of the complex.

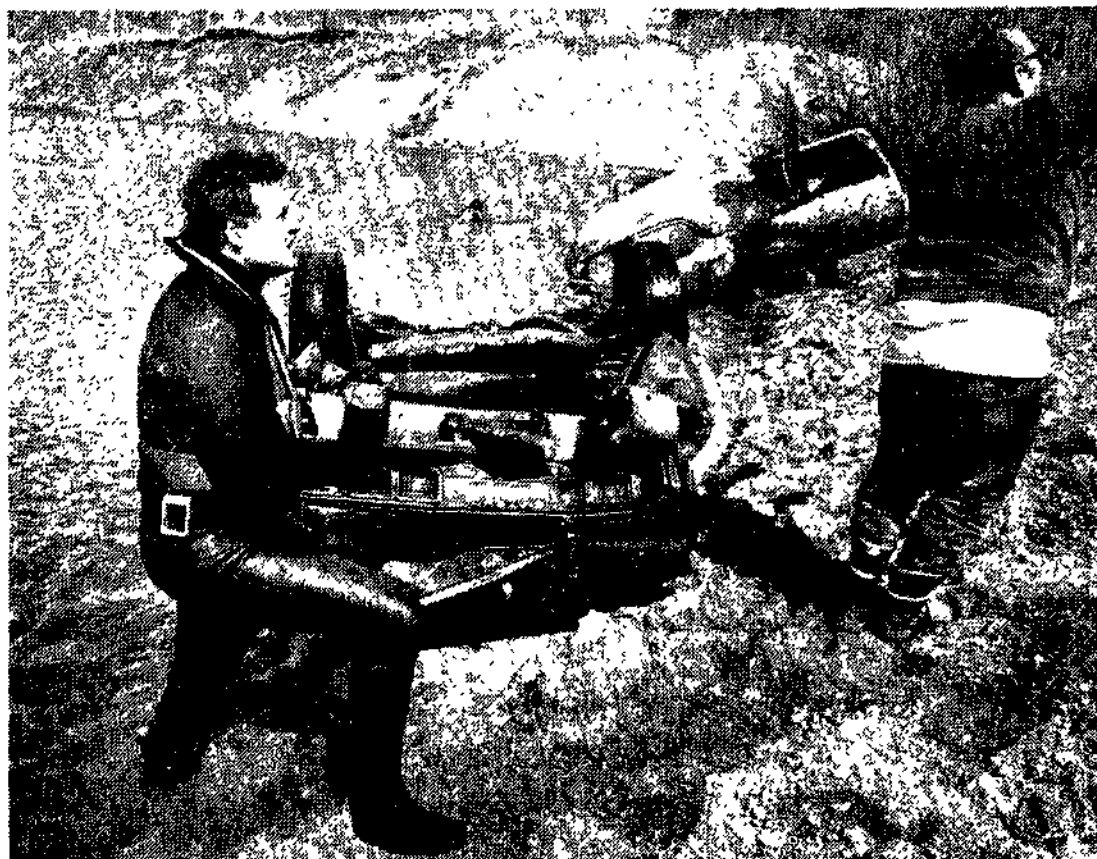

"They know what they're doing. They'll fill it up and make it successful," he said.

Espy's partner, Tony Audino, is not so sure.

"I've heard they had problems," he said. "I hope they don't."

"If everything gets filled up I think it would be great. It can't do anything but better Des Plaines. I don't see Skindivers bring up a graveyard of junked cars — but not the body of missing Barbara Glueckert.

New hunt for teen fruitless

Scuba divers from nine area fire departments, about 65 Army Reserve units and investigators from Mount Prospect searched a number of rock quarries located southeast of Elgin Saturday in a massive but futile effort to find the body of missing Mount Prospect teen-ager Barbara Glueckert.

Related story on Page 7

Several cars were towed out of the water and trunks were forced open as investigators followed a hunch that her body possibly had been dumped in the quarry area. Army reserves of the 12th Special Forces, a Green Beret unit in Arlington Heights, searched the land for possible burial sites around the quarries, owned by the Chicago Gravel Co. The all-day search did not result in recovery of the girl's body, which police believe may be buried somewhere near Huntley, Ill.

Preparing for the plunge.

Divers surface in their futile search.

Car repairs found costly, varied

Car owners who need auto body repair service face a costly, essentially unregulated industry whose pricing practices can vary by hundreds of dollars for the same work, a Herald study has found.

From dealer-run body shops to independent operations, the costs of labor and parts can vary vastly from shop to shop despite the fact that all use the same manufacturer's pricing and labor time guidelines to make their estimates.

The Herald found a difference of nearly $200 in the estimates quoted to repair a typical "fender-bender" — dented left front fender.

THE DAMAGED vehicle, a 1975 Chevrolet Nova, was taken to 13 are

auto dealerships. Based on their estimates, the study found that:

- The cost to repair the car ranged from $227.92 quoted by one independent body shop to $414.07 quoted by another independent shop, even though all the shops estimated the same amount of time to complete the work.

- Labor costs ranged from $61.20 estimated by an independent shop to $150 by one Chevrolet dealership.

- Parts costs varied from $114.21 quoted by two firms to as high as $229 quoted by two other firms.

- Both the lowest and highest estimates came from independent body shops, while the variation in dealer-quoted estimates varied by more than $100, from $267.27 to $379.62.

- None of the 13 estimates was the same, although two estimates were $2 apart.

- Ten of the 13 shops that receive discounts on parts passed part of the discount along to the customer.

The car had a dented fender, broken headlight frame and a small scratch on the front bumper. It had been damaged while parked on a street, and repairs were to be paid by an insurance company.

All the shops asked what insurance company was involved, presumably because Allstate and State Farm insurance companies use their own adjusters to estimate damage costs.

ALL USED A book that lists General Motors parts costs and the suggested labor repair time to prepare their estimates. The shops listed essentially the same parts needed for the repair, although the two lowest estimates eliminated a costly new bumper from the charges.

The bumper had a two-inch scratch, but the majority of the shops said the customer would be justified in in-how it could hurt business," he said. Parking is the big issue for Audino. "The people coming down here are bummed out about having to pay for parking," he said. Audino is not the only one upset about the parking meters. Businessmen in the area agree that most persons would rather drive to a shopping center where they can park for free rather than come downtown to contend with meters and tickets.

"THE ONLY WAY you're going to get them in to shop is with free parking for at least two hours," said Bob Kramer, who manages the Alpine Camera Shop, 886 Lee St.

Much of the ill-feeling businessmen have about the parking situation is directed at the Behrel Parking Plaza, which looms between the railroad tracks and Ellinwood Street.

"That's a monstrosity over there," watchmaker Jack Rappoport said, waving a delicate crystal toward the deck.

Rappoport runs a watch repair shop at 1478 Miner St. Most of his business is mail-order, so he said the success or failure of Superblock will not affect him.

It will affect Ric Pofahl, however, Pofahl manages The Toy and Hobby House, 1486 Miner St.

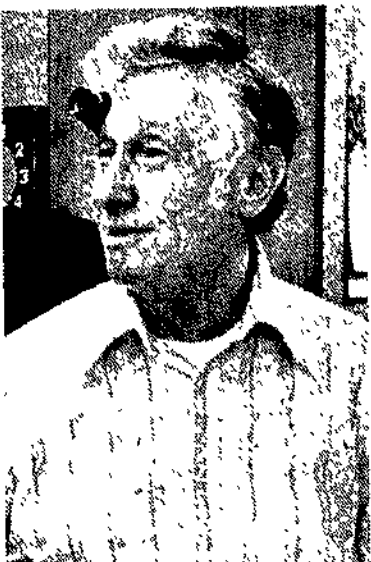

"I guess I've taken a wait-and-see attitude," Pofahl said.

"I think everybody in town hopes it goes. I don't think it's possible for it to hurt our business. If it brings people downtown, it will help," he said.

Like the other businessmen, Pofahl is dismayed by the parking ramp on

FRANK SVOBODA doesn't know how Superblock will affect him. He's owned a men's store in Des Plaines for 54 years.

Ellinwood Street.

"Have you walked down Ellinwood Street? It's like walking in the bottom of a very deep cavern," he said.

FRANK SVOBODA has owned and managed a clothing store at 1440 Miner St. for 54 years.

Svoboda originally was wary of the Superblock idea. Now he's completely behind it.

"It's there. We've got to get it going," Svoboda said. "If people are going to knock the thing, it will be licked before it opens."

VOTE REPUBLICAN APRIL 5, ELK GROVE TOWNSHIP

Paid for by Republican Township Election Committee, 200 Marshall, Des Plaines, Illinois - A.M. Stevens, Chairman.

Crowd cheers hometown champs

Fremd High School's girls' basketball team, third-place finishers this weekend in the first-ever girls' state tournament, came home to the cheers of about 500 fans at a victory celebration Sunday at the school, 1000 S. Quentin Rd., Palatine.

A caravan of cars followed the team bus through downtown Palatine to the school, where the enthusiastic crowd looked on as the copper-colored trophy, won by Coach Carol Plodzein, below, and her team, was presented with a kiss to principal Thomas Howard.

Unions to tell why they back Volberding

Members of Des Plaines' three city employe unions today will discuss why they are backing Herbert H. Volberding for mayor in the April 19 election.

Volberding, a city police detective, is one of seven candidates seeking the mayor's post. The union endorsed him after a candidates forum March 24. Volberding, a city employe, also is a member of the Combined Counties Police Assn., one of the three unions.

Separate chapters of the Assn. of Independent Municipal Employees represent public works and fire department employes. About 300 of the city's 400 workers are members of the unions.

The session tentatively is scheduled for 4:30 p.m. at Oehler's Funeral Home, Lee and Perry streets.

JOHN LUETY, president of the Des Plaines chapter of CCPA, said he hopes to explain in greater detail why the union believes Volberding will make the best mayor.

"We want to give our justifications for backing him," Luety said.

In a letter issued following the endorsement, the unions said Volberding "can bridge the communications gap and balance the interests of management and labor" if elected mayor. The letter said the current city administration is fighting the unions and that Volberding, as a "member of the work force," would be cooperative-in negotiations.

This is the first year that the employe unions have publicly backed candidates in the election. Five of the seven appeared before the union membership to seek its endorsement. In addition to Volberding, other candidates were Mayor Charles J. Bolek, Walter Cloutier, Lorraine Angell and David Wolf. Vernon Eckland and Christian Figge did not appear at the union candidates' night. The union also endorsed Curtiss Schmidt, aldermanic candidate in the 6th Ward, and Carol Kempick, candidate in the 7th Ward. They were the only two council candidates to seek union endorsement.

Dist. 59 adds election judges

With an unusually large voter turnout anticipated for the unit district referendum and school board election Saturday, Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 will have four additional judges at each of its five polling places.

The Dist. 59 Board of Education has voted to have nine judges rather than the usual five at each polling place "for the convenience of the electorate."

The additional judges will cost an extra $600, which will be paid by Dist. 59, High School Dist. 214 and Harper College, Board Pres. Judith Zanca said.

Area residents had requested the district set up additional polling places to accommodate the anticipated heavy voter turnout, but officials in Cook County Schools Supt. Richard Martwick's office said the list of polling places already had been published and it is too late to add to it.

The five polling places are Grove Junior High School, 777 Elk Grove Blvd., Elk Grove Village, Holmes Junior High School, 1900 W. Longquist Blvd., Mount Prospect; Lively Junior High School, 999 Leicester Rd., Elk Grove Village; and Friendship Junior High School, 550 Elizabeth Ln., Des Plaines.

Truschke criticizes GOP tactics

Inquiry into newsletter sought

The Democratic candidate for Elk Grove Township supervisor has asked the state's attorney's office to investigate whether incumbent Republicans have used taxpayers' money for political purposes.

James Truschke has charged the Republicans mailed out a township newsletter a week before the Tuesday election, the first such letter mailed to "voters who have resided in Elk Grove Township for years and who have never received such reports before."

Supervisor Richard Hall denied the charges, saying the newsletter was one of the township's quarterly letters distributed regularly.

HALL SAID about 20,000 copies of the newsletter were mailed, adding the circulation was increased between 25 and 30 per cent over the last mailing in December.

The newsletter cost about $1,000 to print, Hall said. It was mailed at bulk rates at a cost of $1,500.

"Every quarter we've increased coverage," Hall said. "We've planned this from the beginning and have substantially increased coverage over the last four years."

He said one issue the Democrats have used in the campaign is the lack of communication between township officials and residents.

THE NEWSLETTER was scheduled to be mailed March 14, but a problem with the printer delayed it until March 21, Hall said.

It previously has been distributed door-to-door by volunteers, Township Clerk Sharon Sharp said. "But we thought if we had volunteers on the street, it would look political," she said.

Hall said the mailing was the first step in a new system in which a semi-annual newsletter will be mailed to all township residents.

The newsletter does not contain a plea for votes, but it "front page story" quotes Hall as saying, "We at Elk Grove Township, the elected officials and our staff, are proud of the township's achievements and believe we have met our obligations and fulfilled the trust of the people..."

EXCEPT for a list of the incumbents in the newsletter's masthead, the newsletter does not name the Republican candidates.

But Truschke called it unethical and "highly" improper and asked State's Atty. Bernard Carey to consider criminal charges.

Truschke cited a federal statute stating a congressman cannot use his free mailing privileges within 28 days of an election. A House resolution passed last week states franking privileges cannot be used within 60 days of an election.

"While these only apply at the federal level, I think they set the tone," he said, adding that depending upon the state's attorney's actions, he will "go to each legislator asking for legislation" for a state law identical to the federal law.

HALL CALLED the charges "a political move."

"They (the Democrats) have no issues and no knowledge of township government so they make slanderous remarks," he said.

"I've received 10 to 15 newsletters

Dems warned of leaflet policy

The Democratic slate for Elk Grove Township has been warned by the Cook County State's Attorney's office that campaign literature must bear the name of the persons who publish it.

Supervisor Richard Hall said the Republican slate has known of the warnings for some time, but did not want to make them a campaign issue.

At least one piece of Democratic literature does not state who published it.

State law requires that the names and addresses of persons or officers of the organization "causing such matter to be printed and distributed" must be printed.

James Truschke, Democratic supervisor candidate, said he received a letter from the state's attorney's office, which quoted the statute and said prosecution is not warranted.

"IT DOES NOT say my literature is improper and indeed it is not improper," Truschke said. "The statute, in effect, I feel is unconstitutional."

Truschke said the state's literature is not anonymous.

"Who's anonymous? I list my name and where each candidate lives. All of my literature says 'a copy of our report filed with the county clerk is available for purchase from the county clerk,'" he said.

Truschke said the "majority of my literature" is rubber stamped with the names of the Democratic committeeman and committee woman.

He said he assumes Hall took the matter to the state's attorney.

Hall, however, said he did not. "I don't know who did and I don't really care," he said.

in the last two weeks, so the idea of a governmental body's newsletter being sent out now is anything but unusual," he said.

Hall said the most recent newsletter differed from past ones in that he did not write a half-page column, which he said, exposed his name more.

"I regret I didn't get it out a week sooner," Hall said. It would have given him (Truschke) a week longer to yell."

Carter energy plan pinches all

WASHINGTON (UPI) — From hints and trial balloons, testimony and tactics, the outlines of President Carter's energy legislation can be seen fairly clearly three weeks before he sends it to Congress.

Carter has said his program will pinch everyone a little, and it may put a dent in his popularity.

White House energy chief James Schlesinger calls it "the moral equivalent of war," and effort requiring united national effort.

SOURCES IN the Capital and energy agencies say the program will include:

- Gasoline. An increase in the federal tax to get people to use less. Carter spokesmen deny he was considering a one-shot increase of 25 cents per gallon, but sources say he may propose 5-cent increases for each of five years, with at least some of the money going to states for energy conservation programs.

- Automobiles. A surcharge on cars that get low gas mileage, perhaps adding up to $500 to the sticker price of the worst gas-guzzlers. Some argue the idea would let the rich choose any car and force the poor into a limited choice.

- Natural gas. An easing of federal price controls on newly discovered natural gas, with some extension of federal controls to gas produced and sold within the same state. Another possibility is a selective pricing system that discourages wasteful use of gas. Carter also is considering a prohibition against use of natural gas where other fuels can be used, such as for industrial and utility steam boilers.

- Oil. Pricing policy about as it is now, with controlled prices that can increase substantially each year and with an end to controls in 1979.

- Coal. A goal of almost doubling production to about one billion tons a year by 1985, coupled with an easier system for forcing utilities and industries to switch from oil and gas to coal. There is authority in present law for required conversions, but they go slowly and that power expires June 30. Carter also may recommend easing clean-air restrictions on use of coal.

- Atomic power. Carter calls nuclear power the lowest priority energy item, but he probably will try to speed up slightly the construction of conventional atomic power plants with improved safeguards. It is believed he

Home-rule vote stirs little furor among residents

The question of whether the Village of Wheeling should adopt home-rule powers by referendum has raised little of the furor expected among village residents.

Since the board voted in January to place the home-rule issue on the April 19 ballot, home rule has received total support from all candidates in the municipal election. Village officials said the issue has stirred little discussion for a referendum that will expand the powers of village government in all areas, including taxes.

Lorraine Lark, chairman of Wheeling's home-rule fact finding committee, said her citizens group has not been asked to appear before civic or homeowners associations to speak about the home-rule issue. The committee conducted a four-month study of home-rule powers before recommending that the issue be placed before the voters in a referendum.

THE VILLAGE MUST conduct a referendum to assume home-rule powers because Wheeling's population is 19,000. Municipalities with populations of 25,000 or more automatically were granted home-rule powers in 1970 when the new state constitution was written.

"The home-rule committee is willing to meet with anyone or answer any questions. Nobody has called us. The candidates are passing out our brochures at their coffees and the brochures must be answering people's questions," she said.

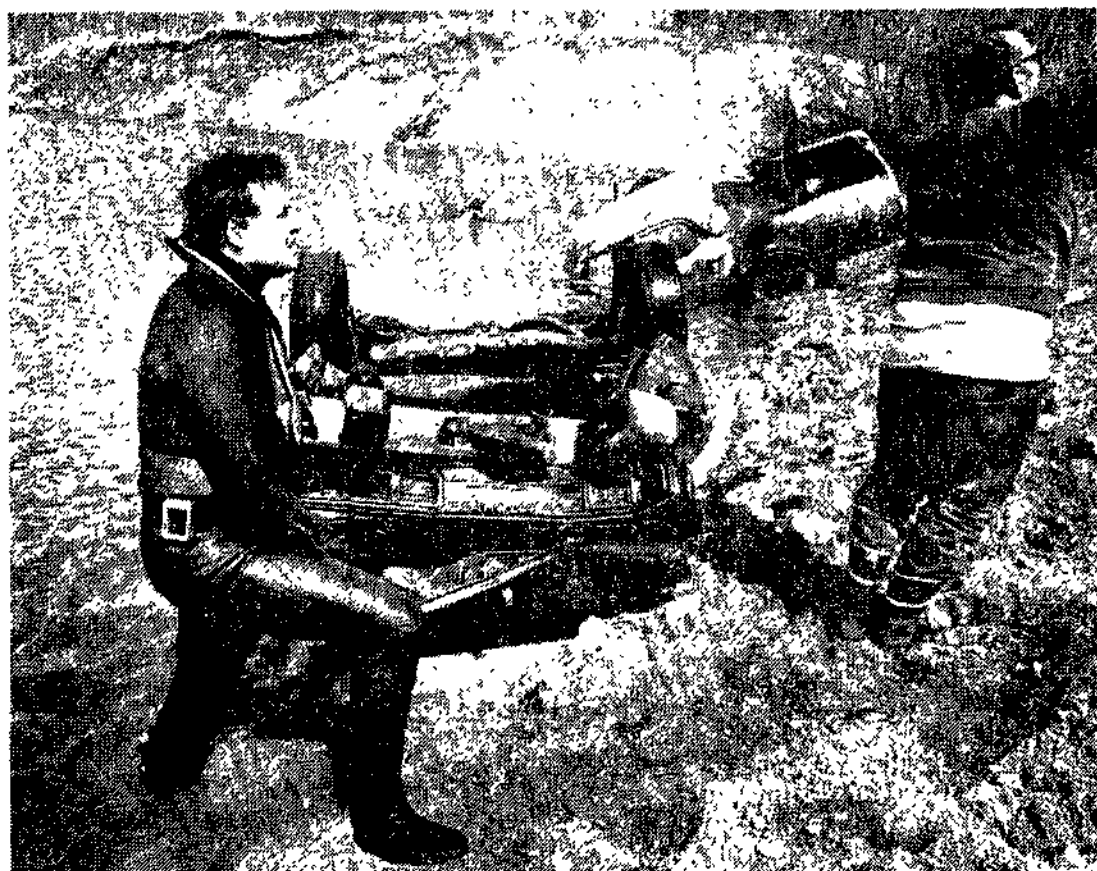

The brochure prepared by the committee is being distributed throughout the village. It outlines the history of home rule, the requirements for assuming home-rule powers and the expanded powers granted to a municipality. It also gives examples of the ways in which various communities used their home-rule powers to increase revenues.

Under home-rule, village laws would supersede all but federal law. Wheeling currently is subject to county, state and federal laws.

MEMBERS OF the fact-finding committee in January told trustees they favor home-rule powers with limitations for the village. The committee has asked the provisions for recall of public officials who misuse home-rule powers and an ordinance requiring an advisory referendum on large bond issues. The committee also has asked that taxing and bonding powers be limited.

The committee's recommendations are supported by members of the Better Environment, Service and Trust (BEST) party, the Wheeling Citizens Party (WCP) and the two independent candidates.

Anyone seeking information on home rule may contact the home-rule fact finding committee at the village hall, 255 W. Dundee Rd., or may call 537-2141.

Skindivers bring up a graveyard of junked cars — but not the body of missing Barbara Glueckert.

New hunt for teen fruitless

Scuba divers from nine area fire departments, about 65 Army Reserve units and investigators from Mount Prospect searched a number of rock quarries located southeast of Elgin Saturday in a massive but futile effort to find the body of missing Mount Prospect teen-ager Barbara Glueckert.

Related story on Page 7

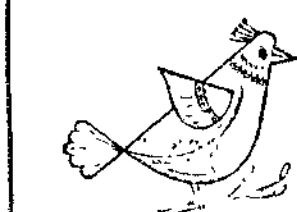

Several cars were towed out of the water and trunks were forced open as investigators followed a hunch that her body possibly had been dumped in the quarry area. Army reserves of the 12th Special Forces, a Green Beret unit in Arlington Heights, searched the land for possible burial sites around the quarries, owned by the Chicago Gravel Co. The all-day search did not result in recovery of the girl's body, which police believe may be buried somewhere near Huntley, Ill.

Car repairs found costly, varied

Car owners who need auto body repair service face a costly, essentially unregulated industry whose pricing practices can vary by hundreds of dollars for the same work, a Herald study has found.

From dealer-run body shops to independent operations, the costs of labor and parts can vary vastly from shop to shop despite the fact that all use the same manufacturer's pricing and labor time guidelines to make their estimates.

The Herald found a difference of nearly $200 in the estimates quoted to repair a typical "fender-bender" — dented left front fender.

auto dealerships. Based on their estimates, the study found that:

- The cost to repair the car ranged from $227.92 quoted by one independent body shop to $414.07 quoted by another independent shop, even though all the shops estimated the same amount of time to complete the work.

- Labor costs ranged from $61.20 estimated by an independent shop to $150 by one Chevrolet dealership.

- Parts costs varied from $114.21 quoted by two firms to as high as $229 quoted by two other firms.

- Both the lowest and highest estimates came from independent body shops, while the variation in dealer-quoted estimates varied by more than $100, from $267.27 to $379.62.

- None of the 13 estimates was the same, although two estimates were $2 apart.

- Ten of the 13 shops that receive discounts on parts passed part of the discount along to the customer.

The car had a dented fender, broken headlight frame and a small scratch on the front bumper. It had been damaged while parked on a street, and repairs were to be paid by an insurance company.

All the shops asked what insurance company was involved, presumably because Allstate and State Farm insurance companies use their own adjusters to estimate damage costs.

ALL USED A book that lists General Motors parts costs and the suggested labor repair time to prepare their estimates. The shops listed essentially the same parts needed for the repair, although the two lowest estimates eliminated a costly new bumper from the charges.

THIS DAMAGE will cost from $227 to $414 to repair, depending on which Northwest suburban auto body shop you select. The $200 range in prices among 13 estimates reflected varying labor and parts cost — and the recommendation of some repair shops to replace the car's bumper.

Home-rule powers give more flexibility: study

Home-rule powers would give Wheeling increased flexibility in taxing, licensing, municipal improvements, land use and law enforcement, according to a report from Village Atty. John Burke.

Burke said there are "numerous advantages in operating the village as a home-rule unit." He said the "more controversial aspects of home-rule government is the ability to impose taxes heretofore not allowed by state law."

"Although... it may seem that a home-rule unit has the opportunity to pass numerous and various types of excessive taxes, it should be remembered that elected officials are responsible and responsive to the citizens of the community," he said.

BURKE SAID homerule allows communities to spread the tax burden among different elements in the village rather than relying on increases in property taxes. He said alternatives include taxes on cigarettes, drugs, food, fuel oil, gasoline, hotel and motel rooms and liquor.

"Other areas could be taxed, keeping real estate and other basic taxes at a reasonable rate," he said.

Home-rule powers could aid the village in a number of problem areas, including its struggle to collect fire tax revenues from a portion of the village outside the Wheeling Rural Fire Protection District.

"Home-rule gives the municipality much more freedom in the ways and means of financing and raising revenue. Wheeling has several areas which could be classified as special service districts, and additional revenue to provide those services could be raised," he said.

The village's efforts to pass an ordinance requiring developers to donate land or money to parks and school districts also will be helped by home-rule powers, Burke said.

"THE LAND dedication ordinance... would have a better legal basis if the Village of Wheeling was a home-rule unit," he said.

Chances for passing an effective vandalism ordinance also are increased with home-rule powers, Burke said. He said home rule allows the village to jail offenders as well as levy fines in excess of the current $500 limit.

"The areas of regulation could include traffic, building, zoning, sanitation, nuisance, civil disturbance and all other matters of public health, safety, morals and welfare. If such a code was enacted with more stringent penalties, an ordinance proposed could have much greater effect in deterring crime," he said.

Burke said government officials must respond to the needs of the citizens whether the village is "home-rule or otherwise."

"If they (officials) abuse the many powers given them under a home-rule authority, citizens will certainly react," he said.

Monoson bribery trial starts today in Chicago

Former Wheeling Village Trustee Gilbert J. Monoson goes on trial today in Cook County Circuit Court on charges of bribery and official misconduct.

Monoson will appear before Cook County Circuit Court Judge Warren Wolfson at 9 a.m. at the Richard J. Daley Center, Chicago.

Monoson, who ran for office in 1975 on a reform ticket, was indicted July 29 by a Cook County Grand Jury. Monoson is charged with three counts of bribery, one count of attempted bribery and four counts of official misconduct.

The charges stem from Monoson's alleged offer to use his influence on the village board to obtain a zoning variation for George Carpin, president of GEC Industries, 422 Mercantile Ct., in exchange for a $10,000 "no collateral loan." Carpin's factory did not meet village building codes.

Monoson resigned from the village to comply with the building code. Car-pin has agreed to correct violations in the building and village officials said they will drop the lawsuit when the corrections are completed, board after the indictment, but has pleaded innocent to the charges. He faces a maximum three-year prison sentence and a $10,000 fine if convicted.

Since the indictment, the village has filed suit against Carpin to force him

Crowd cheers hometown champs

Fremd High School's girls' basketball team, third-place finishers this weekend in the first-ever girls' state tournament, came home to the cheers of about 500 fans at a victory celebration Sunday at the school, 1000 S. Quentin Rd., Palatine.

A caravan of cars followed the team bus through central Palatine to the school, where the enthusiastic crowd looked on as the copper-colored trophy, won by Coach Carol Plodzein, below, and her team, was presented with a kiss to principal Thomas Howard.

Parade welcomes eagers

Girls' team puts Fremd on map

You won't find Fremd, Ill., on a map because the city doesn't exist. But the girls' basketball team from Fremd, just might win Fremd a spot on the map next to Palatine, because the team's third-place finish this weekend in the first girls' tournament is the best any Mid-Suburban League team — male or female — has ever done in state basketball play.

Fremd's consolation win over Centralia Saturday topped the season for the team, which lost only two games in four years. One of the losses was to Sterling in Saturday's semifinal game.

HIGH SCHOOL Dist. 211 and village officials said they "wheeled into action" shortly after Fremd's quarter-final win over Hinsdale South Friday afternoon to plan the victory celebration Sunday at Fremd, 1000 S. Quentin Rd., Palatine.

"We didn't want to plan ahead," Fremd Principal Thomas Howard said, "because we thought we'd be a jinx and then they'd be coming home Friday afternoon."

Nevertheless, a crowd of about 100 met the team bus Sunday as it stopped off at Palatine's Howard Johnson Motor Lodge, Ill. Rte. 53 and Northwest Highway, en route to Fremd. Many fans drove cars decked with green and gold streamers, Fremd's colors, or waved signs reading "Vikings are great" and "Welcome home, superstars."

Even before the team's bus was visible on Northwest Highway, the crowd heard its blaring horn and fans in the motel's parking lot answered with applause, cheers and more honking horns.

A CARAVAN OF about 35 cars followed the bus through central Palatine to the victory celebration at Fremd, as students hung out of car windows, cheering and waving to Palatine residents.

Members of the Fremd band, including one saxophonist perched in a tree near a school entrance, and about 100 fans greeted the parade as it pulled into the Fremd lot, horns blaring.

"We are Vikings, we are great," the crowd chanted.

Two tiny fans clutched a sign reading, "Yeah, Aunt Carol (Plodzein), Best coach and team."

"The Fourth of July parade wasn't that long," a Fremd girl said.

ABOUT 500 FANS sat in bleachers Fremd's gym, jumping to their feet repeatedly to give standing ovations to the team, the coach, the copper-colored third-place trophy and Village Pres. Wendell Jones' promise that "next year, we're gonna do this all over again and we're gonna be number one!"

Some took delight in watching their daughters' friends or neighbor children on television. Roy Saindon of Palatine shouted with joy every time player Kathy Pfander's name was mentioned. "I know her parents," he said, "so I'm rooting for her."

OTHERS, LIKE Ray Regelli of Arlington Heights, began the afternoon saying, "They're not as exciting to watch as the boys," but by the fourth period he was cheering for Fremd and yelling "Get 'em girls, go 'get 'em!"

At halftime some patrons were so engrossed in talking about the game that Regelli said, "I'd play the juke-box but I think I'd get my arm broken."

As the clock ran down and the score widened in favor of Sterling, some of the men drifted back to the pool table and pinball machine and others left.

But the final score, 69-57 in favor of Sterling, failed to dampen the spirits of most of the fans.

"I still think it's great," Saindon said after the game. "They were right up there with the champs."

Enthusiasm wins over boys at bar

The piling-pling of the pinball machine stopped, pool cues were set aside and all eyes turned to the corner of the darkened room.

The patrons of Erich's Bar, 15 N. Broadway, Palatine, were ready Saturday afternoon to cheer the Fremd High School girls' basketball team to victory, collect a few bets and down a couple of beers.

Shouts of "Hey, those girls are tough" and whoops of joy were heard each time the local players scored.

SOME OF THE men who said they hadn't just stopped in for a drink and didn't plan to watch the game were still in the bar at halftime, won over by the enthusiasm of the crowd.

Bar owner Jack Nickol said some small bets were placed and that, "Naturally they're all for Fremd."

A Rolling Meadows man, who declined to give his name, said his daughters attend Fremd. "I think this is great. Title IX (which banned sexual discrimination in school activities) has really opened up a lot for the girls. I don't think it'll be too long before they're playing hockey or have male coaches."

Truschke seeks investigation of GOP newsletter

The Democratic candidate for Elk Grove Township supervisor has asked the state's attorney's office to investigate whether incumbent Republicans have used taxpayers' money for political purposes.

James Truschke has charged the Republicans mailed out a township newsletter a week before the Tuesday election, the first such letter mailed to "voters who have resided in Elk Grove Township for years and who have never received such reports before."

Supervisor Richard Hall denied the charges, saying the newsletter was one of the township's quarterly letters distributed regularly.

HALL SAID about 20,000 copies of the newsletter were mailed, adding the circulation was increased between 25 and 30 per cent over the last mailing in December.

The newsletter cost about $1,000 to print, Hall said. It was mailed at bulk rates at a cost of $1,500.

"Every quarter we've increased coverage," Hall said. "We've planned this from the beginning and have substantially increased coverage over the last four years."

He said one issue the Democrats have used in the campaign is the lack of communication between township officials and residents.

THE NEWSLETTER was scheduled to be mailed March 14, but a problem with the printer delayed it until March 21, Hall said.

It previously has been distributed door-to-door by volunteers. Township Clerk Sharon Sharp said, "But we thought if we had volunteers on the street, it would look political," she said.

Hall said the mailing was the first step in a new system in which a semi-annual newsletter will be mailed to all township residents.

The newsletter does not contain a plea for votes, but its front page story quotes Hall as saying, "We at Elk Grove Township, the elected officials and our staff, are proud of the township's achievements and believe we have met our obligations and fulfilled the trust of the people..."

EXCEPT FOR a list of the incumbents in the newsletter's masthead, the newsletter does not name the Republican candidates.

But Truschke called it unethical and "highly" improper and asked State's Atty. Bernard Carey to consider criminal charges.

Truschke cited a federal statute stating a congressman cannot use his

Dems warned of leaflet policy

The Democratic slate for Elk Grove Township has been warned by the Cook County State's Attorney's office that campaign literature must bear the name of the persons who publish it.

Supervisor Richard Hall said the Republican slate has known of the warnings for some time, but did not want to make them a campaign issue.

At least one piece of Democratic literature does not state who published it.

State law requires that the names and addresses of persons or officers of the organization "causing such matter to be printed and distributed" must be printed.

James Truschke, Democratic supervisor candidate, said he received a letter from the state's attorney's office, which quoted the statute and said prosecution is not warranted.

"IT DOES NOT say my literature is improper and indeed it is not improper," Truschke said. "The statute, in effect, I feel is unconstitutional."

Truschke said the slate's literature is not anonymous.

"Who's anonymous? I list my name and where each candidate lives. All of my literature says 'a copy of our report filed with the county clerk is available for purchase from the county clerk,'" he said.

Truschke said the "majority of my literature" is rubber stamped with the names of the Democratic committeeman and committee woman.

He said he assumes Hall took the matter to the state's attorney.

Hall, however, said he did not. "I don't know who did and I don't really care," he said.

free mailing privileges within 28 days of an election. A House resolution passed last week states franking privileges cannot be used within 60 days of an election.

"While these only apply at the federal level, I think they set the tone," he said, adding that depending upon the state's attorney's actions, he will "go to each legislator asking for legislation" for a state law identical to the federal law.

Carter energy plan pinches all

WASHINGTON (UPI) — From hints and trial balloons, testimony and tactics, the outlines of President Carter's energy legislation can be seen fairly clearly three weeks before he sends it to Congress.

Carter has said his program will pinch everyone a little, and it may put a dent in his popularity.

White House energy chief James Schlesinger calls it "the moral equivalent of war," and effort requiring united national effort.

SOURCES IN the Capital and energy agencies say the program will include:

- Gasoline. An increase in the federal tax to get people to use less. Carter spokesmen deny he was considering a one-shot increase of 25 cents per gallon, but sources say he may propose 5-cent increases for each of five years, with at least some of the money going to states for energy conservation programs.

- Automobiles. A surcharge on cars that get low gas mileage, perhaps adding up to $500 to the sticker price of the worst gas-guzzlers. Some argue the idea would let the rich choose any car and force the poor into a limited choice.

- Natural gas. An easing of federal price controls on newly discovered natural gas, with some extension of federal controls to gas produced and sold within the same state. Another possibility is a selective pricing system that discourages wasteful use of gas. Carter also is considering a prohibition against use of natural gas where other fuels can be used, such as for industrial and utility steam boilers.

- Oil Pricing policy about as it is now, with controlled prices that can increase substantially each year and with an end to controls in 1979.

- Coal. A goal of almost doubling production to about one billion tons a year by 1985, coupled with an easier system for forcing utilities and industries to switch from oil and gas to coal. There is authority in present law for required conversions, but they go slowly and that power expires June 30. Carter also may recommend easing clean-air restrictions on use of coal.

- Atomic power. Carter calls nuclear power the lowest priority energy item, but he probably will try to speed up slightly the construction of conventional atomic power plants with improved safeguards. It is believed he

Police nab four, $40,000 in pot in dual effort

Four persons, two of them from Arlington Heights, were arrested and $40,000 worth of marijuana was confiscated Saturday in the climax of a combined investigation by Buffalo Grove and Arlington Heights police.

The two Arlington Heights men, both 18, were arrested Saturday afternoon in Arlington Heights after they allegedly sold five pounds of marijuana to undercover police agents. The arrests ended a three-week investigation by Buffalo Grove Det. Robert Quid.

The identities of the Arlington Heights suspects were not released by police pending investigation into the area drug traffic. Both were charged with possession and delivery of marijuana.

Later Saturday, Buffalo Grove and Arlington Heights police, supplied with information by informants, traveled to west suburban Bensenville where they arrested two men and recovered 44 pounds of marijuana valued at $40,000. Bensenville police assisted in the arrests.

JOSE HERNANDEZ, 28, and Teleford Cantv, 24, both of 334 E. Hillside Ct., Bensenville, were taken into custody and charged with possession and sale of marijuana.

A spokesman for Bensenville police said Sunday he did not know if Hernandez and Cantv still were being held in the municipal lockup.

March 18 Buffalo Grove and Arlington Heights police arrested Michael R. Johnson, 25, of 400 Touhy Ave., Elk Grove Township and 19-year-old Wayne E. Wadulak, 304 Meier Rd., Mount Prospect. Both were charged with possession and delivery of $1,800 worth of marijuana.

Saturday's initial arrests were made by Buffalo Grove police officers Quid, Gary Del Re, Steve Haisley and Sgt. Kenneth Blanchette; Arlington Heights police Sgt. Willard Salee, Pat Kennedy, Steve Lizas and Gerald Besenhoffer, and two Illinois Bureau of Investigation agents.

Village to discuss park development

Development of the Strathmore Grove park site, Arlington Heights Road and Thompson Boulevard, will be discussed by the village board at its 8 p.m. meeting today in village hall, 50 Raupp Blvd.

The village has received a $4,300 donation from Levitt & Sons Inc. to develop the park. The board has debated whether to use the money to construct bike paths or buy trees for the park, but a recent donation of trees may clear the way for bike path construction this summer.

Skindivers bring up a graveyard of junked cars — but not the body of missing Barbara Glueckert.

New hunt for teen fruitless

Scuba divers from nine area fire departments, about 65 Army Reserve units and investigators from Mount Prospect searched a number of rock quarries located southeast of Elgin Saturday in a massive but futile effort to find the body of missing Mount Prospect teen-ager Barbara Glueckert.

Related story on Page 7

Several cars were towed out of the water and trunks were forced open as investigators followed a hunch that her body possibly had been dumped in the quarry area. Army reserves of the 12th Special Forces, a Green Beret unit in Arlington Heights, searched the land for possible burial sites around the quarries, owned by the Chicago Gravel Co. The all-day search did not result in recovery of the girl's body, which police believe may be buried somewhere near Huntley, Ill.

Preparing for the plunge.

Divers surface in their futile search.

Car repairs found costly, varied

Car owners who need auto body repair service face a costly, essentially unregulated industry whose pricing practices can vary by hundreds of dollars for the same work, a Herald study has found.

From dealer-run body shops to independent operations, the costs of labor and parts can vary vastly from shop to shop despite the fact that all use the same manufacturer's pricing and labor time guidelines to make their estimates.

The Herald found a difference of nearly $200 in the estimates quoted to repair a typical "fender-bender" — dented left front fender.

THE DAMAGED vehicle, a 1975 Chevrolet Nova, was taken to 13 area

auto dealerships. Based on their estimates, the study found that:

- The cost to repair the car ranged from $227.92 quoted by one independent body shop to $414.07 quoted by another independent shop, even though all the shops estimated the same amount of time to complete the work.

- Labor costs ranged from $61.20 estimated by an independent shop to $150 by one Chevrolet dealership.

- Parts costs varied from $114.21 quoted by two firms to as high as $229 quoted by two other firms.

- Both the lowest and highest estimates came from independent body shops, while the variation in dealer-quoted estimates varied by more than $100, from $267.27 to $379.62.

- None of the 13 estimates was the same, although two estimates were $2 apart.

- Ten of the 13 shops that receive discounts on parts passed part of the discount along to the customer.

The car had a dented fender, broken headlight frame and a small scratch on the front bumper. It had been damaged while parked on a street, and repairs were to be paid by an insurance company.

All the shops asked what insurance company was involved, presumably because Allstate and State Farm insurance companies use their own adjusters to estimate damage costs.

ALL USED A book that lists General Motors parts costs and the suggested labor repair time to prepare their estimates. The shops listed essentially the same parts needed for the repair, although the two lowest estimates eliminated a costly new bumper from the charges.

The bumper had a two-inch scratch, but the majority of the shops said the customer would be justified in in-

Six precinct polling places for parks election

The Buffalo Grove Park District has established six precincts where voters can cast their ballots in Tuesday's election.

The park district precincts do not correspond with either village or township precincts, and district officials advise residents to check precinct locations before voting.

The polls will be open from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. Two candidates, Barbara Sheldon, 2 Burnt Ember Ct., and William O'Reilly, 1012 Alden Ln., are seeking election to the six-year park board term.

The name of Robert Eaman, 740 Wyngate Ln., also will appear on the ballot even though he has withdrawn as an active candidate.

Precinct polling places are:

- Precinct 1 — Willow Stream Park, Farrington Drive and Woodhollow Lane.
- Precinct 2 — Willow Grove School, 777 Checker Dr.
- Precinct 3 — Emmerich Park, 150 Raupp Blvd.
- Precinct 4 — Aquadome pool, Buffalo Grove High School, Arlington Heights and Dundee roads.
- Precinct 5 — Kingswood Methodist Church, 401 W. Dundee Rd.
- Precinct 6 — Cove Clubhouse, Frenchmen's Cove subdivision, Dundee Road.

Subdivisions to use same polling place

Residents of three subdivisions in Buffalo Grove will be able to cast their votes in the Buffalo Grove Park District and Vernon Township elections at the same polling place Tuesday.

Voters from Heritage Place, The Crossings and Strathmore Grove normally would have to vote in two different places for the two elections, but Vernon Township officials have arranged to allow them to vote in both elections at Precinct 8 at Willow Grove School, 777 Checker Dr.

The park district polling place for the three subdivisions normally is Precinct 2, the Aptakisic-Tripp School. Residents still can vote for park candidates at the Aptakisic School, but can save a trip by voting at Willow Grove School.

Monoson bribery trial starts today in Chicago

Former Wheeling Village Trustee Gilbert J. Monoson goes on trial today in Cook County Circuit Court on charges of bribery and official misconduct.

Monoson will appear before Cook County Circuit Court Judge Warren Wolfson at 9 a.m. at the Richard J. Daley Center, Chicago.

Monoson, who ran for office in 1975 on a reform ticket, was indicted July 29 by a Cook County Grand Jury. Monoson is charged with three counts of bribery, one count of attempted bribery and four counts of official misconduct.

The charges stem from Monoson's alleged offer to use his influence on the village board to obtain a zoning variation for George Carpin, president of GEC Industries, 422 Mercantile Ct., in exchange for a $10,000 "no collateral loan." Carpin's factory did not meet village building codes.

Monoson resigned from the village to comply with the building code. Car-

Since the indictment, the village has filed suit against Carpin to force him

Crowd cheers hometown champs

Fremd High School's girls' basketball team, third-place finishers this weekend in the first-ever girls' state tournament, came home to the cheers of about 500 fans at a victory celebration Sunday at the school, 1000 S. Quentin Rd., Palatine.

A caravan of cars followed the team bus through downtown Palatine to the school, where the enthusiastic crowd looked on as the copper-colored trophy, won by Coach Carol Plodzein, below, and her team, was presented with a kiss to principal Thomas Howard.

Six named to U of I dean's list

Six Buffalo Grove students have been named to the dean's list at the University of Illinois-Champaign. The list includes: Barbara Behar, Mary Dreffin, George Johnson, David Lah-ti, John Staudt and Shelley Verbin. Ronald Shea has been named to the dean's list at Villanova University. Ronald Broadhead was named to the honor roll at the New Mexico Institute of Mining and Technology, and Glenn S. Kiddle qualified for the dean's list at Simpson College.

Plaque dedication

honors contributors

Wheeling will dedicate a plaque honoring persons who contributed $100 or more to the village's Bicentennial celebrations today.

The program will begin at 7:30 p.m. at village hall, 255 W. Dundee Rd.

Esther Davis, chairwoman of the Wheeling Beautification Committee, said the ceremony was postponed until now because of delays in preparing the plaque. The village carillon, installed at village hall in 1975, also will be dedicated.

Free alcoholism seminar

A seminar on alcoholism will be offered free at the College of Lake County from 1 to 4:30 p.m. Thursday in the conference center, 18351 W. Washington St., Grayslake.

The movie, "Father Martin's Chalk Talk on Alcoholism," will be shown at 1 p.m. followed by a talk on alcoholism and the family experience by Lynda Flowers, educational program coordinator for the Lake County Council on Alcoholism.

For further information, contact Jackie Hassett, 223-6601, ext. 430.

Parade welcomes cagers

Girls' team puts Fremd on map

You won't find Fremd, Ill., on a map because the city doesn't exist.

But the girls' basketball team from Fremd, Palatine's "other" high school, just might win Fremd a spot on the map next to Palatine, because the team's third-place finish this weekend in the first girls' tournament is the best any Mid-Suburban League team — male or female — has ever done in state basketball play.

Fremd's consolation win over Centralia Saturday topped the season for the team, which lost only two games in four years. One of the losses was to Sterling in Saturday's semifinal game.

HIGH SCHOOL Dist. 211 and village officials said they "whipped into action" shortly after Fremd's quarter-final win over Hinsdale South Friday afternoon to plan the victory celebration Sunday at Fremd, 1000 S. Quentin Rd., Palatine.

"We didn't want to plan ahead," Fremd Principal Thomas Howard said, "because we thought we'd be a jinx and then they'd be coming home Friday afternoon."

Nevertheless, a crowd of about 100 met the team bus Sunday as it stopped off at Palatine's Howard Johnson Motor Lodge, Ill. Rte. 53 and Northwest Highway, en route to Fremd. Many fans drove cars decked with green and gold streamers, Fremd's colors, or waved signs reading "Vikings are great" and "Welcome home, superstars."

Even before the team's bus was visible on Northwest Highway, the crowd heard its blaring horn and fans in the motel's parking lot answered with applause, cheers and more honking horns.

A CARAVAN OF about 35 cars followed the bus through central Palatine to the victory celebration at Fremd, as students hung out of car windows, cheering and waving to Palatine residents.

Members of the Fremd band, including one saxophonist perched in a tree near a school entrance, and about 100 fans greeted the parade as it pulled into the Fremd lot, horns blaring.

"We are Vikings, we are great," the crowd chanted.

Two tiny fans clutched a sign reading, "Yeah, Aunt Carol (Plodzein), Best coach and team."

"The Fourth of July parade wasn't that long," a Fremd girl said.

ABOUT 500 FANS sat in bleachers in Fremd's gym, jumping to their feet repeatedly to give standing ovations to the team, the coach, the copper-colored third-place trophy and Village Pres. Wendell Jones' promise that "next year, we're gonna do this all over again and we're gonna be number one!"

"Congratulations, lady basketball players. Your community is really proud of you," Jones said. "This is the biggest thing that has happened in Palatine since the Chicago and North Western Railroad."

Coach Carol Plodzein received a standing ovation when Dist. 211 Supt. Richard Kolze praised her "conduct and dignity on the bench. We couldn't have found a better person for this role."

Ms. Plodzein in turn thanked Fremd students, faculty and Booster club members for their support. "Your confidence and cheering is a big part of why we finished third in the state," she said, as team members jumped to their feet to direct a cheer at the audience.

"WE'RE FROM Fremd, couldn't be prouder. Can't hear us now, we'll yell a little louder."

Then, there were handshakes and hugs all around for the team as the crowd engulfed them on the gym floor.

"When I came to Fremd in September, I said I was honored to take over

Enthusiasm wins over boys at bar

The pling-pling of the pinball machine stopped, pool cues were set aside and all eyes turned to the corner of the darkened room.

The patrons of Erich's Bar, 15 N. Brockway, Palatine, were ready Saturday afternoon to cheer the Fremd High School girls' basketball team to victory, collect a few bets and down a couple of beers.

Shouts of "Hey, those girls are tough" and whoops of joy were heard each time the local players scored.

SOME OF THE men who said they had just stopped in for a drink and didn't plan to watch the game were still in the bar at halftime, won over by the enthusiasm of the crowd.

Bar owner Jack Nickol said some small bets were placed and that, "Naturally they're all for Fremd."

A Rolling Meadows man, who declined to give his name, said his daughters attend Fremd. "I think this is great: Title IX (which banned sexual discrimination in school activities) has really opened up a lot for the girls. I don't think it'll be too long before they're playing hockey or have male coaches."

Some took delight in watching their daughters' friends or neighbor children on television. Roy Saindon of Palatine shouted with joy every time player Kathy Pfander's name was mentioned. "I know her parents," he said, "so I'm rooting for her."

OTHERS, LIKE Ray Regelli of Arlington Heights, began the afternoon saying, "They're not as exciting to watch as the boys," but by the fourth period he was cheering for Fremd and yelling "Get 'em girls, go get 'em!"

At halftime some patrons were so engrossed in talking about the game that Regelli said, "I'd play the jukebox but I think I'd get my arm broken."

As the clock ran down and the score widened in favor of Sterling, some of the men drifted back to the pool table and pinball machine and others left.

But the final score, 69-57 in favor of Sterling, failed to dampen the spirits of most of the fans.

"I still think it's great," Saindon said after the game. "They were right up there with the champs."

the school with the best student body in the Northwest suburbs," Howard told the audience. "And after this week, I believe it."

Carter energy plan pinches all

WASHINGTON (UPI) — From hints and trial balloons, testimony and tactics, the outlines of President Carter's energy legislation can be seen fairly clearly three weeks before he sends it to Congress.

Carter has said his program will pinch everyone a little, and it may put a dent in his popularity.

White House energy chief James Schlesinger calls it "the moral equivalent of war," and effort requiring united national effort.

SOURCES IN the Capital and energy agencies say the program will include:

- Gasoline. An increase in the federal tax to get people to use less. Carter spokesmen deny he was considering a one-shot increase of 25 cents per gallon, but sources say he may propose 5-cent increases for each of five years, with at least some of the money going to states for energy conservation programs.

- Automobiles. A surcharge on cars that get low gas mileage, perhaps adding up to $500 to the sticker price of the worst gas-guzzlers. Some argue the idea would let the rich choose any car and force the poor into a limited choice.

- Natural gas. An easing of federal price controls on newly discovered natural gas, with some extension of federal controls to gas produced and sold within the same state. Another possibility is a selective pricing system that discourages wasteful use of gas. Carter also is considering a prohibition against use of natural gas where other fuels can be used, such as for industrial and utility steam boilers.

- Oil. Pricing policy about as it is now, with controlled prices that can increase substantially each year and with an end to controls in 1979.

- Coal. A goal of almost doubling production to about one billion tons a year by 1985, coupled with an easier system for forcing utilities and industries to switch from oil and gas to coal. There is authority in present law for required conversions, but they go slowly and that power expires June 30. Carter also may recommend easing clean-air restrictions on use of coal.

- Atomic power. Carter calls nuclear power the lowest priority energy item, but he probably will try to speed up slightly the construction of conventional atomic power plants with improved safeguards. It is believed he

Life miserable in leaky condos; owners seek aid

by MARY DIETER

Alberto has said a hole as wide as his double bed in his bedroom wall.

Katherine Santoro has water and nail spots on the walls of five rooms.

Both live in $43,000 condominium apartments in Village on the Lake, and say they can't get satisfaction from the developer.

And both say they feel unimportant and consequently ignored by the large United Development Co., Chicago.

"IT'S VERY, VERY discouraging," said Mrs. Santoro nearly a year after water spots began forming on her bedroom wall.

"You put up with certain things, but something like this is ridiculous."

Mrs. Santoro, who is divorced, has lived with her four children in a three bedroom condominium apartment for three years.

Since moving in, and after the warranties expired, her dishwasher, refrigerator, garbage disposal and oven have broken. She has resigned herself to the fact there is nothing she can do about them.

But when water spots six inches round and nail spots in rows began to form, that was the last straw.

"THEY ARE THE most unsightly, horrible things you've ever seen," she said. Even worse, she said, is that the spots start to flake in humid weather.

Mrs. Santoro began writing letters to Village on the Lake and United Development in May 1976. To date, she said United has acknowledged only a "single spot in the master bedroom that appeared to be a water mark."

Thomas McDade, United vice president, said water could have penetrated the outside brick walls during unusually severe storms last April and early May.

He also said the inspector noticed a number of nail spots that were "due to the gas pilots (on the stove) being set too high and giving off soot."

Tassan also has water spots in five rooms of his condominium unit. Tell-tale marks in the master bedroom show water may have seeped between the interior wall boards, marking the walls in almost horizontal lines.

HE BECAME DISGUSTED with repeated efforts to get satisfaction. Tassan moved into the condominium unit in August 1974 and reported one spot on his original inspection report.

By August 1975, spots were in three rooms. United responded by applying silicone to the building's exterior penetration.

But Tassan said the spots continued to appear. Last August, representatives from United Development cut a hole about one foot high and four feet wide in the master bedroom wall to check for water penetration.

McDade wrote to Tassan telling him "although there was a sign of past water penetration, there was no recent evidence of moisture."

But Tassan tells it differently. He said the half-inch thick insulation and Skindivers bring up a graveyard of junked cars — but not the body of missing Barbara Glueckert.

New hunt for teen fruitless

Scuba divers from nine area fire departments, about 65 Army Reserve units and investigators from Mount Prospect searched a number of rock quarries located southeast of Elgin Saturday in a massive but futile effort to find the body of missing Mount Prospect teen-ager Barbara Glueckert.

Related story on Page 7

Several cars were towed out of the water and trucks were forced open as investigators followed a hunch that her body possibly had been dumped in the quarry area. Army reserves of the 12th Special Forces, a Green Beret unit in Arlington Heights, searched the land for possible burial sites around the quarries, owned by the Chicago Gravel Co. The all-day search did not result in recovery of the girl's body, which police believe may be buried somewhere near Huntley, Ill.

Preparing for the plunge.

Divers surface in their futile search.

Car repairs found costly, varied

Car owners who need auto body repair service face a costly, essentially unregulated industry whose pricing practices can vary by hundreds of dollars for the same work, a Herald study has found.

From dealer-run body shops to independent operations, the costs of labor and parts can vary vastly from shop to shop despite the fact that all use the same manufacturer's pricing and labor time guidelines to make their estimates.

The Herald found a difference of nearly $200 in the estimates quoted to repair a typical "fender-bender" — dented left front fender.

THE DAMAGED vehicle, a 1975 Chevrolet Nova, was taken to 13 are

Herald consumer report

by Toni Ginnetti

auto dealerships. Based on their estimates, the study found that:

- The cost to repair the car ranged from $227.92 quoted by one independent body shop to $414.07 quoted by another independent shop, even though all the shops estimated the same amount of time to complete the work.

- Labor costs ranged from $81.20 estimated by an independent shop to $150 by one Chevrolet dealership.

- Parts costs varied from $114.21 quoted by two firms to as high as $229 quoted by two other firms.

- Both the lowest and highest estimates came from independent body shops, while the variation in dealer-quoted estimates varied by more than $100, from $267.27 to $379.62.

- None of the 13 estimates was the same, although two estimates were $2 apart.

- Ten of the 13 shops that receive discounts on parts passed part of the discount along to the customer.

The car had a dented fender, broken headlight frame and a small scratch on the front bumper. It had been damaged while parked on a street, and repairs were to be paid by an insurance company.

All the shops asked what insurance company was involved, presumably because Allstate and State Farm insurance companies use their own adjusters to estimate damage costs.

ALL USED A book that lists General Motors parts costs and the suggested labor repair time to prepare their estimates. The shops listed essentially the same parts needed for the repair, although the two lowest estimates eliminated a costly new bumper from the charges.

The bumper had a two-inch scratch, but the majority of the shops said the customer would be justified in in-

THIS DAMAGE will cost from $227 to $414, to repair, depending on which Northwest suburban auto body shop you select. The $200 range in prices among 13 estimates reflected varying labor and parts cost — and the recommendation of some repair shops to replace the car's bumper.

exterior bricks were wet to the touch.

McDade indicated in his letter to Tassan the wall remained open and to check it in the next major rain storm. And the hole still is there, hidden by a large painting.

"Water can gain entry in a given type of storm anywhere," McDade said. "We've done everything we can do."

"I'm acquainted with one or two persons I'm convinced could not be satisfied if we put the whole building under a glass dome," he said.

McDade said water seepage problems result from failure of the caulking around windows. That is a maintenance, not a construction, problem, he said.

Seepage of water from the balcony above also can cause spots, McDade said, adding he recently sent letters to condominium unit owners suggesting they keep their balcony doors closed.

ANOTHER REASON, he said, is failure in the brick. The silicone treatment should have corrected that, he said.

"If there is reason to believe there is a construction defect, the (homeowners') board can make a case of it," McDade said.

It is doing just that. A lawsuit will be filed soon by building No. 5, the building in which both Mrs. Santoro and Tassan live. They are not alone in their plight.

At least 19 other condominium units in the 94-unit building also are affected and more than 60 units throughout the 442-unit complex have problems, said Dennis Cuny, vice president of the Elk Grove Estates Homeowners Assn.

THOMAS RETTENBACHER, Elk Grove Village building commissioner, said the village will pursue the matter if the association provides specific information about the problems.

"You get to a certain point and that's just maintenance of the building," Rettenbacher said. "To our knowledge, there are no construction problems or code violations."

"The main thing is to know exactly why moisture is coming through the walls," he said.

"If the village has any authority in the matter, we certainly, absolutely, would pursue it without hesitation."

3 compete for scholarship

Three area high school seniors recently were selected as Illinois entrants in the 1977 Earthwatch scholarship program. They are Laura Fortman and Kyra Sarnier from Prospect Heights and Carolyn Vasquez from Elk Grove Village.

Scholarships are awarded to 200 students across the nation to accompany research scientists on expeditions during the summer. Students will learn field methodology and other research assistant skills for research projects in archeology, anthropology, astronomy, biology, geology, marine science and zoology.

Carter energy plan pinches all

WASHINGTON (UPI) — From hints and trial balloons, testimony and tactics, the outlines of President Carter's energy legislation can be seen fairly clearly three weeks before he sends it to Congress.

Carter has said his program will pinch everyone a little, and it may put a dent in his popularity.

White House energy chief James Schlesinger calls it "the moral equivalent of war," and effort requiring united national effort.

SOURCES IN the Capital and energy agencies say the program will include:

- Gasoline. An increase in the federal tax to get people to use less. Carter spokesmen deny he was considering a one-shot increase of 25 cents per gallon, but sources say he may propose 5-cent increases for each of five years, with at least some of the money going to states for energy conservation programs.

- Automobiles. A surcharge on cars that get low gas mileage, perhaps adding up to $500 to the sticker price of the worst gas-guzzlers. Some argue the idea would let the rich choose any car and force the poor into a limited choice.

- Natural gas. An easing of federal price controls on newly discovered natural gas, with some extension of federal controls to gas produced and sold within the same state. Another possibility is a selective pricing system that discourages wasteful use of gas. Carter also is considering a prohibition against use of natural gas where other fuels can be used, such as for industrial and utility steam boilers.

- Oil. Pricing policy about as it is now, with controlled prices that can increase substantially each year and with an end to controls in 1979.

- Coal. A goal of almost doubling production to about one billion tons a year by 1985, coupled with an easier system for forcing utilities and industries to switch from oil and gas to coal. There is authority in present law for required conversions, but they go slowly and that power expires June 30. Carter also may recommend easing clean-air restrictions on use of coal.

- Atomic power. Carter calls nuclear power the lowest priority energy item, but he probably will try to speed up slightly the construction of conventional atomic power plants with improved safeguards. It is believed he

Pageler, Elgin gain support of Dist. 54 union

by HOLLY HANSON

Incumbent Margaret Pageler and newcomer Peggie Elgin will be supported by the Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 Teachers' Union in their bids for three-year terms on the board of education.

Mrs. Pageler, 293 Jefferson, Hoffman Estates; Mrs. Elgin, 1889 Governors Ln., Hoffman Estates, and three other candidates are seeking the two 3-year terms. Mrs. Pageler was elected to the board in 1974.

Endorsements were made following a question-and-answer session with district teachers this week. The union chose not to support a candidate for the 1-year term that will be filled April 9, Teachers' Union Pres. Charlotte Weber said.

MRS. WEBER said teachers have been sent letters explaining why Dist. 54 teachers should support Mrs. Pageler and Mrs. Elgin.

"Our recommendations are based on educational concerns," Mrs. Weber said. "These are the candidates we feel are best from an education viewpoint."

Mrs. Pageler was endorsed for her "proven record," Mrs. Weber said.

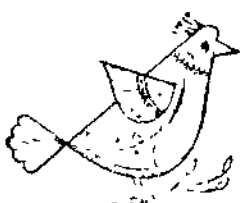

"Mrs. Pageler is very well informed, intelligent, fair, honest, articulate and very accessible to everyone in the community," she said.

Mrs. Pageler said she is pleased to receive the support of the teachers.

"I have been told that one reason teachers support me is that I insist that people who are affected by a decision should be involved in the process," she said. "If that's the quality they are looking for, I'm very much delighted to have their endorsement."

MRS. WEBER said union members were very impressed with Mrs. Elgin's background as a journalist and Skindivers bring up a graveyard of junked cars — but not the body of missing Barbara Glueckert.

New hunt for teen fruitless

Scuba divers from nine area fire departments, about 65 Army Reserve units and investigators from Mount Prospect searched a number of rock quarries located southeast of Elgin Saturday in a massive but futile effort to find the body of missing Mount Prospect teen-ager Barbara Glueckert.

Related story on Page 7

Several cars were towed out of the water and trunks were forced open as investigators followed a hunch that her body possibly had been dumped in the quarry area. Army reserves of the 12th Special Forces, a Green Beret unit in Arlington Heights, searched the land for possible burial sites around the quarries, owned by the Chicago Gravel Co. The all-day search did not result in recovery of the girl's body, which police believe may be buried somewhere near Huntley, Ill.

Preparing for the plunge.

Divers surface in their futile search.

Car repairs found costly, varied

Car owners who need auto body repair service face a costly, essentially unregulated industry whose pricing practices can vary by hundreds of dollars for the same work, a Herald study has found.

From dealer-run body shops to independent operations, the costs of labor and parts can vary vastly from shop to shop despite the fact that all use the same manufacturer's pricing and labor time guidelines to make their estimates.

The Herald found a difference of nearly $200 in the estimates quoted to repair a typical "fender-bender" — dented left front fender.

THE DAMAGED vehicle, a 1975 Chevrolet Nova, was taken to 13 are

auto dealerships. Based on their estimates, the study found that:

- The cost to repair the car ranged from $227.92 quoted by one independent body shop to $414.07 quoted by another independent shop, even though all the shops estimated the same amount of time to complete the work.

- Labor costs ranged from $61.20 estimated by an independent shop to $150 by one Chevrolet dealership.

- Parts costs varied from $114.21 quoted by two firms to as high as $229 quoted by two other firms.

- Both the lowest and highest estimates came from independent body shops, while the variation in dealer-quoted estimates varied by more than $100, from $267.27 to $379.62.

- None of the 13 estimates was the same, although two estimates were $2 apart.

- Ten of the 13 shops that receive discounts on parts passed part of the discount along to the customer.

The car had a dented fender, broken headlight frame and a small scratch on the front bumper. It had been damaged while parked on a street, and repairs were to be paid by an insurance company.

All the shops asked what insurance company was involved, presumably because Allstate and State Farm insurance companies use their own adjusters to estimate damage costs.

ALL USED A book that lists General Motors parts costs and the suggested labor repair time to prepare their estimates. The shops listed essentially the same parts needed for the repair, although the two lowest estimates eliminated a costly new bumper from the charges.

THIS DAMAGE will cost from $227 to $414 to repair, depending on which Northwest suburban auto body shop you select. The $200 range in prices among 13 estimates reflected varying labor and parts cost — and the recommendation of some repair shops to replace the car's bumper.

Teen's death sparks drive 'for place to go'

by ROBERT KYLE

Sometime during the two days that Jeanette Adams lay dying, the conversation among her friends turned to a familiar complaint.

There's no place for kids to go in Schaumburg, said the blue jeans crowd in the hospital waiting room, you can't hang around the pinball arcade after you've run out of quarters, and they kick you out of the shopping center whenever some merchant complains that you're bad for business.

Sometime during that long wait, Mike Netti came up with his idea: Let's fix up the barn — the vacant, village-owned Great Hall — put in some pinball machines and run our own hangout.

THAT WAS MARCH 17, a Thursday, the day of the traffic accident on Wise Road west of Cedarcrest Drive. Elaine Osterberg, 18, of Schaumburg was killed, and Miss Adams and Patricia L. Soelter, 18, also of Schaumburg were injured.

By Saturday, all three girls had died.

Within a week, Mike Netti's idea had taken root at Schaumburg High School. More than 1,200 students had signed petitions asking the village for the building. A Jeanette Adams memorial fund had accumulated $700 in "dimes and dollars," and the typing classes were turning out letters to village officials and potential donors of equipment and maintenance money.

And it had found an adult champion in Dennis Hopy, the Schaumburg Police Dept. juvenile officer and Jeanette's foster father since last November.

THE LACK OF gathering places for teen-agers had nothing to do with Jeanette's death, Hopy says. She wasn't cruising aimlessly at the time of the crash but coming home from her job as a telephone solicitor.

But, in a way, her life illustrated the nowhere-to-go blues. Her friends say her home life was not happy, and Hopy says she got into just enough trouble to know him professionally but not enough to become a case in juvenile court.

She changed when she moved in with her new foster parents, her grades improved, she got a job, and she was accepted at Harper College only days before she died.

"A kid needs a place to go where he can get away from adults for a while," Hopy says. "If a kid has a fight with his parents and leaves home mad, he's going to lash out at the first adult who crosses him. If he can get away from the adult world for a while, it gives him time to cool off."

HOPY AND HIS YOUNG lobbyists took their case to a village board committee Tuesday and got a cautious "maybe." The trustees wanted a written proposal and wondered if the students would settle for part of the Great Hall on a trial basis.

"This is the first time we've ever had the young people say 'this is what we want' rather than the older people telling us what the kids want," said Trustee Ray LeBeau.

Encouraged, Hopy and the students said they'll approach another village committee today and the full village board April 12.

"The kids really need someplace of their own," Neti said later. "All they do now is drive around until they run out of money for gas. Then they get bored and throw a rock through somebody's window."

"Kids complain about it all the time, but for some reason everybody really got interested in doing something after Jeanette got killed."

SCHAUMBURG'S GREAT HALL has stood empty since the police department moved to its new headquarters last June. Now, students at Schaumburg High School want to use the building as a teen center and dedicate it to the memory of a classmate who died.

Holmes blames Barber for parks problems

Comr William Holmes has blamed lame-duck Comr. Thomas Barber for the problems of the Hoffman Estates Park District.

"He's so negative that it's impossible to do anything positive on the board with a member like him," said Holmes, who, like Barber, is not seeking reelection.

Holmes made the statement as he announced his endorsements in Tuesday's park board race and criticized Barber's statement that Board Pres. George Rush and Park Director Alen Binder are the central issues in the campaign.

BARBER'S REMARKS were the result of a "personal vendetta" he is waging against Binder, Holmes said, and should have been kept to himself.

Holmes also said Barber "knows" the central issues in the campaign are the district's finances and the prospect that a referendum will be required in the near future.

"Mr. Barber suffers from a childish approach to life," Holmes said. "I think the best thing that's happened to the park district to date is that Mr. Barber won't be on the board anymore."

Barber responded that if an elected official feels strongly about an issue, he said, it is his duty to speak out.

"If I just shut my mouth on all the things that I think are wrong, I guess that would make him happy, but it wouldn't make me positive," Barber said.

HE ALSO SAID that Holmes objects to his criticism of Binder without knowing why Barber has criticized him.

"I don't have anything personal against Al Binder," he said. "I'm glad we hired him. But I think he's served his time."

Barber said he feels the way he does about the park director because he is bothered by the turnover of park staff under Binder's direction, constant presentation of large budgets that the board has to cut and Binder's constant warnings that unless more revenue is generated, the park district will go downhill.

Earlier, Barber had endorsed Charles Loveisky, Henry Bollman, Gerald Lavey and incumbent Nancy Wroblewski in their bids for four of the six seats up for election as the board expands from five to seven members in April.

RUSH, THE ONLY commissioner whose seat is not up for reelection, has endorsed Diane Foley, the Samuel Cannon-Joseph Crawford team and incumbent Thomas McGuire.

Holmes became the last commissioner to become publicly involved in the campaign last week when he formally endorsed Cannon and Crawford. In his remarks published last week, Barber had said that Binder has given his allegiance to Rush rather than to the park board in general.

Holmes countered that Barber often asks the staff for detailed reports and that they end up being developed for Barber alone. Then, "if he happens to show up" at the board meeting where the information is presented, Holmes said, Barber criticizes the report.

IT WAS AN "all-time low," Holmes added, for Barber to "take pot shot at (Rush), a man who had a heart attack because he was working so hard for the park district."

Since his appointment a year ago, Holmes said, he has tried to "temper" controversies on the board and he did not want to get involved publicly in the election or in criticizing any commissioners.

However, he said he decided to make his views known when he read Barber's comments because "I was rather upset and I still am."

Meanwhile in other park election news, the four candidates endorsed by Barber appear to have formed a loosely-organized team.

BOLLMAN, LAVESKY, Loveisky and Mrs. Wroblewski pooled resources for a campaign party Friday, and the group is also joining together to coordinate poll watching.

"It's not really fair to call us a team," Lavey said, however. While the four agree on some issues, he said, they disagree on others.

"We are still pretty much independents," he said. "We're forced into this pooling situation because it seems like a couple of other sets of candidates have formed."

Cannon and Crawford are running as a team and Roy (Bud) Kimmel, Melvin Timmons and Steven Cohen also are running jointly.

Crowd cheers hometown champs

Fremd High School's girls' basketball team, third-place finishers this weekend in the first-ever girls' state tournament, came home to the cheers of about 500 fans at a victory celebration Sunday at the school, 1000 S. Quentin Rd., Palatine.

A caravan of cars followed the team bus through downtown Palatine to the school, where the enthusiastic crowd looked on as the copper-colored trophy, won by Coach Carol Plodzein, below, and her team, was presented with a kiss to principal Thomas Howard.

Police nab four, $40,000 in pot in combined bust

Four persons, two of them from Arlington Heights, were arrested and $40,000 worth of marijuana was confiscated Saturday in the climax of a combined investigation by Buffalo Grove and Arlington Heights police.

The two Arlington Heights men, both 18, were arrested Saturday afternoon in Arlington Heights after they allegedly sold five pounds of marijuana to undercover police agents. The arrests ended a three-week investigation by Buffalo Grove Det. Robert Quid.

The identities of the Arlington Heights suspects were not released by police pending investigation into the area drug traffic. Both were charged with possession and delivery of marijuana.

Later Saturday, Buffalo Grove and Arlington Heights police, supplied with information by informants, traveled to west suburban Bensenville where they arrested two men and recovered 44 pounds of marijuana valued at $40,000. Bensenville police assisted in the arrests.

JOSE HERNANDEZ, 28, and Tele-Sford Cantv, 24, both of 334 E. Hillside Ct., Bensenville, were taken into custody and charged with possession and sale of marijuana.

A spokesman for Bensenville police said Sunday he did not know if Hernandez and Cantv still were being held in the municipal lockup.

Saturday's arrests were the fourth combined operation of Arlington Heights and Buffalo Grove police which has resulted in a major arrest this year.

March 18 Buffalo Grove and Arlington Heights police arrested Michael F. Johnson, 25, of 400 Touhy Ave., Elk Grove Township and 19-year-old Wayne E. Wadulak, 304 Meier Rd., Mount Prospect. Both were charged with possession and delivery of $1,800 worth of marijuana.

Saturday's initial arrests were made by Buffalo Grove police officers Quid, Gary Del Re, Steve Haisley and Sgt. Kenneth Blanchette; Arlington Heights police Sgt. Willard Alton, Pat Kennedy, Steve Lizas and Gerald Benenhoffer, and two Illinois Bureau of Investigation agents.

Girls' team puts Fremd on map

You won't find Fremd, Ill., on a map because the city doesn't exist.

But the girls' basketball team from Fremd, Palatine's "other" high school, just might win Fremd a spot on the map next to Palatine, because the team's third-place finish this weekend in the first girls' tournament is the best any Mid-Suburban League team — male or female — has ever done in state basketball play.

Fremd's consolation win over Centralia Saturday topped the season for the team, which lost only two games in four years. One of the losses was to Sterling in Saturday's semifinal game.

HIGH SCHOOL Dist. 211 and village officials said they "whipped into action" shortly after Fremd's quarter-final win over Hinsdale South Friday afternoon to plan the victory celebration Sunday at Fremd, 1000 S. Quentin Rd., Palatine.

"We didn't want to plan ahead," Fremd Principal Thomas Howard said, "because we thought we'd be a jinx and then they'd be coming home Friday afternoon."

Nevertheless, a crowd of about 100 met the team bus Sunday as it stopped off at Palatine's Howard Johnson Motor Lodge, Ill. Rte. 53 and Northwest Highway, en route to Fremd. Many fans drove cars decked with green and gold streamers, Fremd's colors, or waved signs reading "Vikings are great" and "Welcome home, superstars."

Even before the team's bus was visible on Northwest Highway, the crowd heard its blaring horn and fans in the hotel's parking lot answered with applause, cheers and more honking horns.

A CARAVAN OF about 35 cars followed the bus through central Palatine to the victory celebration at Fremd, as students hung out of car windows, cheering and waving to Palatine residents.

Members of the Fremd band, including one saxophonist perched in a tree near a school entrance, and about 100 fans greeted the parade as it pulled into the Fremd lot, horns blaring.

"We are Vikings, we are great," the crowd chanted.

Two tiny fans clutched a sign reading, "Yeah, Aunt Carol (Plodzein), Best coach and team."

"The Fourth of July parade wasn't that long," a Fremd girl said.

ABOUT 500 FANS sat in bleachers in Fremd's gym, jumping to their feet repeatedly to give standing ovations to the team, the coach, the copper-colored third-place trophy and Village Pres. Wendell Jones' promise that "next year, we're gonna do this all over again and we're gonna be number one!"

"Congratulations, lady basketball players. Your community is really proud of you," Jones said. "This is the biggest thing that has happened in Palatine since the Chicago and North Western Railroad."

Coach Carol Plodzein received a standing ovation when Dist. 211 Supt. Richard Kolze praised her "conduct and dignity on the bench. We couldn't have found a better person for this role."

Ms. Plodzein in turn thanked Fremd students, faculty and Booster club members for their support. "Your confidence and cheering is a big part of why we finished third in the state," she said, as team members jumped to their feet to direct a cheer at the audience.

"WE'RE FROM Fremd, couldn't be louder. We can't hear us now, we'll yell a little louder."

Then, there were handshakes and hugs all around for the team as the crowd engulfed them on the gym floor.

"When I came to Fremd in September, I said I was honored to take over the school with the best student body in the Northwest suburbs," Howard told the audience. "And after this week, I believe it."

Enthusiasm wins over boys at bar

The pling-pling of the pinball machine stopped, pool cues were set aside and all eyes turned to the corner of the darkened room.

The patrons of Erich's Bar, 15 N. Brockway, Palatine, were ready Saturday afternoon to cheer the Fremd High School girls' basketball team to victory, collect a few bets and down a couple of beers.

Shouts of "Hey, those girls are tough" and whoops of joy were heard each time the local players scored.

SOME OF THE men who said they had just stopped in for a drink and didn't plan to watch the game were still in the bar at halftime, won over by the enthusiasm of the crowd.

Bar owner Jack Nickol said some small bets were placed and that, "Naturally they're all for Fremd."

A Rolling Meadows man, who declined to give his name, said his daughters attend Fremd. "I think this is great. Title IX (which banned sexual discrimination in school activities) has really opened up a lot for the girls. I don't think it'll be too long before they're playing hockey or have male coaches."

Some took delight in watching their daughters' friends or neighbor children on television. Roy Saindon of Palatine shouted with joy every time player Kathy Pfander's name was mentioned. "I know her parents," he said, "so I'm rooting for her."

OTHERS, LIKE Ray Regelli of Arlington Heights, began the afternoon saying, "They're not as exciting to watch as the boys," but by the fourth period he was cheering for Fremd and yelling "Get 'em girls, go get 'em!"

At halftime some patrons were so engrossed in talking about the game that Regelli said, "I'd play the jukebox but I think I'd get my arm broken."

As the clock ran down and the score widened in favor of Sterling, some of the men drifted back to the pool table and pinball machine and others left.

But the final score, 69-57 in favor of Sterling, failed to dampen the spirits of most of the fans.

"I still think it's great," Saindon said after the game. "They were right up there with the champs."

Carter energy plan pinches all

WASHINGTON (UPI) — From hints and trial balloons, testimony and tactics, the outlines of President Carter's energy legislation can be seen fairly clearly three weeks before he sends it to Congress.

Carter has said his program will pinch everyone a little, and it may put a dent in his popularity.

White House energy chief James Schlesinger calls it "the moral equivalent of war," and effort requiring united national effort.

SOURCES IN the Capital and energy agencies say the program will include:

- Gasoline. An increase in the federal tax to get people to use less. Carter spokesmen deny he was considering a one-shot increase of 25 cents per gallon, but sources say he may propose 5-cent increases for each of five years, with at least some of the money going to states for energy conservation programs.

- Automobiles. A surcharge on cars that get low gas mileage, perhaps adding up to $500 to the sticker price of the worst gas-guzzlers. Some argue the idea would let the rich choose any car and force the poor into a limited choice.

- Natural gas. An easing of federal price controls on newly discovered natural gas, with some extension of federal controls to gas produced and sold within the same state. Another possibility is a selective pricing system that discourages wasteful use of gas. Carter also is considering a prohibition against use of natural gas where other fuels can be used, such as for industrial and utility steam boilers.

- Oil. Pricing policy about as it is now, with controlled prices that can increase substantially each year and with an end to controls in 1979.

- Coal. A goal of almost doubling production to about one billion tons a year by 1985, coupled with an easier system for forcing utilities and industries to switch from oil and gas to coal. There is authority in present law for required conversions, but they go slowly and that power expires June 30. Carter also may recommend easing clean-air restrictions on use of coal.

- Atomic power. Carter calls nuclear power the lowest priority energy item, but he probably will try to speed up slightly the construction of conventional atomic power plants with improved safeguards. It is believed he

Garbage pickup fee of $3 asked in '77-78 budget

If the city council gives its approval, Rolling Meadows homeowners soon will be paying the city $3 per month to pick up their garbage.

The city has provided free scavenger service to residents of single-family homes since 1969, and is one of the only communities in the Northwest suburbs to do so.

The 1977-78 budget submitted to the council by acting City Mgr. Charles Green asks that residents be charged for the service. In a cover letter to the aldermen, Green said the fee is needed to pay for the rising cost of the service and new equipment.

GREEN HOPES TO replace two 9-year-old garbage trucks with new vehicles costing $55,000 each.

Operating supplies for the garbage department cost the city $150,000 last year and are expected to cost $174,000 this year, a 16 per cent increase. The total cost of the service in 1976 was $409,673 and is expected to rise to $562,716 this year.

The $3 fee will generate $147,600 in revenue, Green said.

Mayor Roland J. Meyer said he received the budget this week and was not aware it included the scavenger service fee. But he said he is "not surprised it's in there."

"I know they've been doing surveys on costs and have talked about a garbage fee," he said. "Some felt we should have done it last year." The council in August 1975 rejected a proposal to charge a fee.

MEYER SAID he hopes city officials do not have to impose the fee, but if they do "I can't say I oppose it."

He noted that the city's sales tax revenue is up and "if it stays high, the council may not have to go to that." Just because you put it in the budget, doesn't mean you leave it there."

Meyer said Rolling Meadows prided itself on providing free residential service but said, "We had free service for nine years and that's nine years more than anyone else."

Teen's death sparks drive for place to go

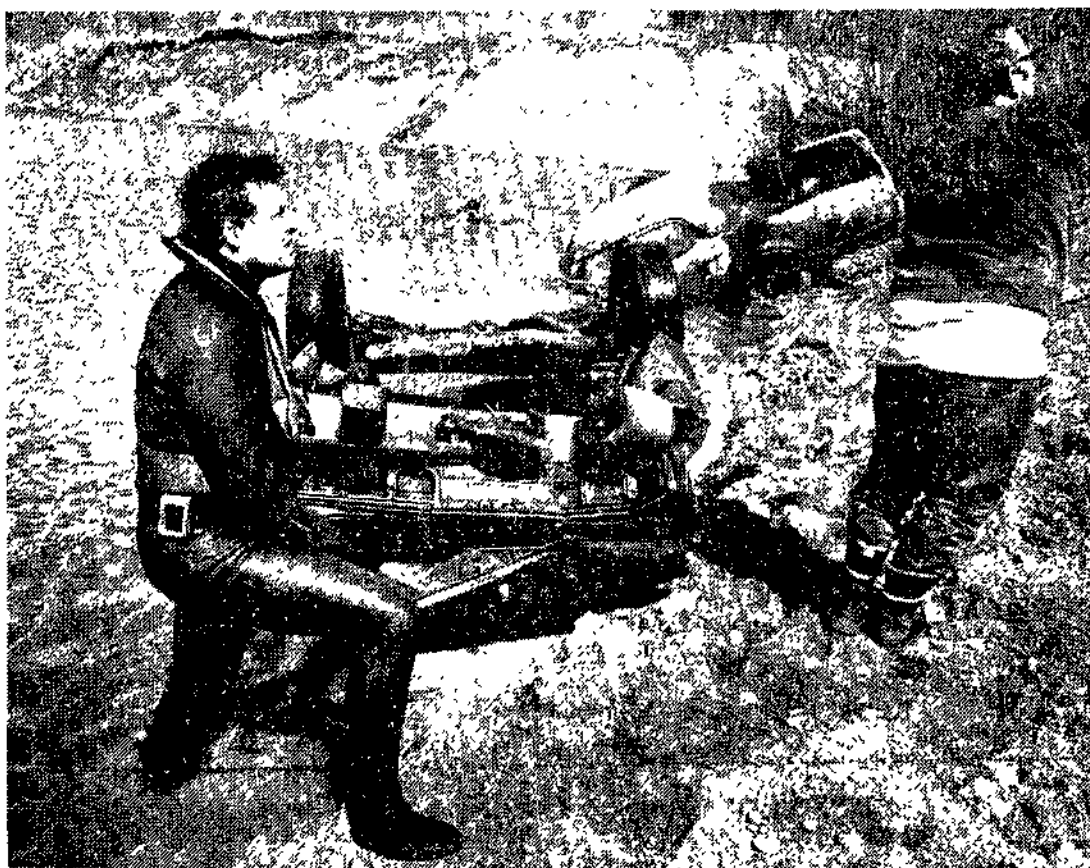

by ROBERT KYLE

Sometime during the two days that Jeanette Adams lay dying, the conversation among her friends turned to a familiar complaint.

There's no place for kids to go in Schaumburg, said the blue jeans crowd in the hospital waiting room, you can't hang around the pinball arcade after you've run out of quarters, and they kick you out of the shopping center whenever some merchant complains that you're bad for business.

Sometime during that long wait, Mike Netti came up with his idea: Let's fix up the barn — the vacant, Skindivers bring up a graveyard of junked cars — but not the body of missing Barbara Glueckert.

New hunt for teen fruitless

Scuba divers from nine area fire departments, about 65 Army Reserve units and investigators from Mount Prospect searched a number of rock quarries located southeast of Elgin Saturday in a massive but futile effort to find the body of missing Mount Prospect teen-ager Barbara Glueckert.

Related story on Page 7

Several cars were towed out of the water and trunks were opened as investigators followed a hunch that her body possibly had been dumped in the quarry area. Army reserves of the 12th Special Forces, a Green Beret unit in Arlington Heights, searched the land for possible burial sites around the quarries, owned by the Chicago Gravel Co. The all-day search did not result in recovery of the girl's body, which police believe may be buried somewhere near Huntley, Ill.

Divers surface in their futile search.

Car repairs found costly, varied

Car owners who need auto body repair service face a costly, essentially unregulated industry whose pricing practices can vary by hundreds of dollars for the same work, a Herald study has found.

From dealer-run body shops to independent operations, the costs of labor and parts can vary vastly from shop to shop despite the fact that all use the same manufacturer's pricing and labor time guidelines to make their estimates.

The Herald found a difference of nearly $200 in the estimates quoted to repair a typical "fender-bender" — dented left fender.

THE DAMAGED vehicle, a 1975 Chevrolet Nova, was taken to 13 are

auto dealerships. Based on their estimates, the study found that:

- The cost to repair the car ranged from $227.92 quoted by one independent body shop to $414.07 quoted by another independent shop, even though all the shops estimated the same amount of time to complete the work.

- Labor costs ranged from $61.20 estimated by an independent shop to $150 by one Chevrolet dealership.

- Parts costs varied from $114.21 quoted by two firms to as high as $229 quoted by two other firms.

- Both the lowest and highest estimates came from independent body shops, while the variation in dealer-quoted estimates varied by more than $100, from $267.27 to $379.62.

- None of the 13 estimates was the same, although two estimates were $2 apart.

- Ten of the 13 shops that receive discounts on parts passed part of the discount along to the customer.

The car had a dented fender, broken headlight frame and a small scratch on the front bumper. It had been damaged while parked on a street, and repairs were to be paid by an insurance company.

All the shops asked what insurance company was involved, presumably because Allstate and State Farm insurance companies use their own adjusters to estimate damage costs.

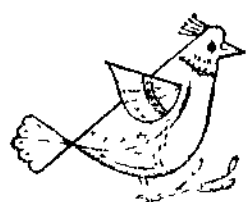

ALL USED A book that lists General Motors parts costs and the suggested labor repair time to prepare their estimates. The shops listed essentially the same parts needed for the repair, although the two lowest estimates eliminated a costly new bumper from the charges.

The bumper had a two-inch scratch, but the majority of the shops said the customer would be justified in in-

THIS DAMAGE will cost from $227 to $414 to repair, depending on which Northwest suburban auto body shop you select. The $200 range in prices among 13 estimates reflected varying labor and parts cost — and the recommendation of some repair shops to replace the car's bumper.

SCHAUMBURG'S GREAT HALL has stood empty since the police department moved to its new headquarters last June. Now, students at Schaumburg High School want to use the building as a teen center and dedicate it to the memory of a classmate who died.

village-owned Great Hall — put in some pinball machines and run our own hangout.

THAT WAS MARCH 17, a Thursday, the day of the traffic accident on Wise Road west of Cedarcrest Drive. Elaine Osterberg, 18, of Schaumburg was killed, and Miss Adams and Patricia L. Soelter, 18, also of Schaumburg were injured.

By Saturday, all three girls had died.

Within a week, Mike Netti's idea had taken root at Schaumburg High School. More than 1,200 students had signed petitions asking the village for the building. A Jeanette Adams memorial fund had accumulated $700 in "dimes and dollars," and the typing classes were turning out letters to village officials and potential donors of equipment and maintenance money.

And it had found an adult champion in Dennis Hopy, the Schaumburg Police Dept. juvenile officer and Jeanette's foster father since last November.

THE LACK OF gathering places for teenagers had nothing to do with Jeanette's death, Hopy says. She wasn't cruising aimlessly at the time of the crash but coming home from her job as a telephone solicitor.

But, in a way, her life illustrated the nowhere-to-go blues. Her friends say her home life was not happy, and Hopy says she got into just enough trouble to know him professionally but not enough to become a case in juvenile court.

She changed when she moved in with her new foster parents, her grades improved, she got a job, and she was accepted at Harper College only days before she died.

"A kid needs a place to go where he can get away from adults for a while," Hopy says. "If a kid has a fight with his parents and leaves home mad, he's going to lash out at the first adult who crosses him. If he can get away from the adult world for a while, it gives him time to cool off."

HOGY AND HIS YOUNG lobbyists took their case to a village board committee Tuesday and got a cautious "maybe." The trustees wanted a written proposal and wondered if the students would settle for part of the Great Hall on a trial basis.

"This is the first time we've ever had the young people say 'this is what we want' rather than the older people telling us what the kids want," said Trustee Ray LeBeau.

Encouraged, Hopy and the students said they'll approach another village committee today and the full village board April 12.

"The kids really need someplace of their own," Netti said later. "All they do now is drive around until they run out of money for gas. Then they get bored and throw a rock through somebody's window."

Monoson bribery trial starts today in Chicago

Former Wheeling Village Trustee Gilbert J. Monoson goes on trial today in Cook County Circuit Court on charges of bribery and official misconduct.

Monoson will appear before Cook County Circuit Court Judge Warren Wolfson at 9 a.m. at the Richard J. Daley Center, Chicago.

Monoson, who ran for office in 1975 on a reform ticket, was indicted July 29 by a Cook County Grand Jury.

Monoson is charged with three counts of bribery, one count of attempted bribery and four counts of official misconduct.

The charges stem from Monoson's alleged offer to use his influence on the village board to obtain a zoning variation for George Carpin, president of GEC Industries, 422 Mercantile Ct., in exchange for a $10,000 "no collateral loan." Carpin's factory did not meet village building codes.

Monoson resigned from the village board after the indictment, but has pleaded innocent to the charges. He faces a maximum three-year prison sentence and a $10,000 fine if convicted.

Since the indictment, the village has filed suit against Carpin to force him to comply with the building code. Carpin has agreed to correct violations in the building and village officials said they will drop the lawsuit when the corrections are completed.

Life miserable in leaky condos; owners seek aid

by MARY DIETER

Alberto Tassan has a hole as wide as his double bed in his bedroom wall. Katherine Santoro has water and nail spots on the walls of five rooms. Both live in $43,000 condominium apartments in Village on the Lake, and say they can't get satisfaction from the developer.

And both say they feel unimportant and consequently ignored by the large United Development Co., Chicago.

"IT'S VERY, VERY discouraging," said Mrs. Santoro nearly a year after water spots began forming on her bedroom wall.

"You put up with certain things, but something like this is ridiculous."

Mrs. Santoro, who is divorced, has lived with her four children in a three bedroom condominium apartment for three years.

Since moving in, and after the warranties expired, her dishwasher, refrigerator, garbage disposal and oven have broken. She has resigned herself to the fact there is nothing she can do about them.

But when water spots six inches round and nail spots in rows began to form, that was the last straw.

"THEY ARE THE most unsightly, horrible things you've ever seen," she said. Even worse, she said, is that the spots start to flake in humid weather.

Mrs. Santoro began writing letters to Village on the Lake and United Development in May 1976. To date, she said United has acknowledged only a "single spot in the master bedroom that appeared to be a water mark."

Thomas McDade, United vice president, said water could have penetrated the outside brick walls during unusually severe storms last April and early May.

He also said the inspector noticed a number of nail spots that were "due to the gas pilots (on the stove) being set too high and giving off soot."

Tassan also has water spots in five rooms of his condominium unit. Teiltale marks in the master bedroom show water may have seeped between the interior wall boards, marking the walls in almost horizontal lines.

HE BECAME DISGUSTED with repeated efforts to get satisfaction. Tassan moved into the condominium unit in August 1974 and reported one spot on his original inspection report.

By August 1975, spots were in three rooms. United responded by applying silicone to the building's exterior penetration.

But Tassan said the spots continued to appear. Last August, representatives from United Development cut a hole about one foot high and four feet wide in the master bedroom wall to check for water penetration.

McDade wrote to Tassan telling him "although there was a sign of past water penetration, there was no recent evidence of moisture."

But Tassan tells it differently. He said the half-inch thick insulation and exterior bricks were wet to the touch.

McDade indicated in his letter to Tassan the wall remained open and to check it in the next major rain storm. And the hole still is there, hidden by a large painting.

"Water can gain entry in a given type of storm anywhere," McDade said. "We've done everything we can do."

"I'm acquainted with one or two persons I'm convinced could not be satisfied if we put the whole building under a glass dome," he said.

McDade said water seepage problems result from failure of the caulking around windows. That is a maintenance, not a construction, problem, he said.

Seepage of water from the balcony above also can cause spots, McDade said, adding he recently sent letters to condominium unit owners suggesting they keep their balcony doors closed.

ANOTHER REASON, he said, is failure in the brick. The silicone treatment should have corrected that, he said.

"If there is reason to believe there is a construction defect, the (homeowners') board can make a case of it," McDade said.

It is doing just that. A lawsuit will be filed soon by building No. 5, the building in which both Mrs. Santoro and Tassan live. They are not alone in their plight.

At least 19 other condominium units in the 94-unit building also are affected and more than 60 units throughout the 442-unit complex have problems, said Dennis Cuny, vice president of the Elk Grove Estates Homeowners Assn.

THOMAS RETTENBACHER, Elk Grove Village building commissioner, said the village will pursue the matter if the association provides specific information about the problems.

"You get to a certain point and that's just maintenance of the building," Rettenbacher said. "To our knowledge, there are no construction problems or code violations."

"The main thing is to know exactly why moisture is coming through the walls," he said.

"If the village has any authority in the matter, we certainly, absolutely, would pursue it without hesitation."

Police raid nets 4, $40,000 in combined bust

Four persons, two of them from Arlington Heights, were arrested and $40,000 worth of marijuana was confiscated Saturday in the climax of a combined investigation by Buffalo Grove and Arlington Heights police.

The two Arlington Heights men, both 18, were arrested Saturday afternoon in Arlington Heights after they allegedly sold five pounds of marijuana to undercover police agents. The arrests ended a three-week investigation by Buffalo Grove Det. Robert Quid.

The identities of the Arlington Heights suspects were not released by police pending investigation into the area drug traffic. Both were charged with possession and delivery of marijuana.

Later Saturday, Buffalo Grove and Arlington Heights police, supplied with information by informants, traveled to west suburban Bensenville where they arrested two men and recovered 44 pounds of marijuana valued at $40,000. Bensenville police assisted in the arrests.

JOSE HERNANDEZ, 28, and Teleford Cantv, 24, both of 334 E. Hillside Ct., Bensenville, were taken into custody and charged with possession and sale of marijuana.

A spokesman for Bensenville police said Sunday he did not know if Hernandez and Cantv still were being held in the municipal lockup.

Saturday's arrests were the fourth combined operation of Arlington Heights and Buffalo Grove police which has resulted in a major arrest this year.

March 18 Buffalo Grove and Arlington Heights police arrested Michael P. Johnson, 25, of 400 Touhy Ave., Elk Grove Township and 19-year-old Wayne E. Wadulak, 304 Meier Rd., Mount Prospect. Both were charged with possession and delivery of $1,300 worth of marijuana.

Saturday's initial arrests were made by Buffalo Grove police officers Quid, Gary Del Re, Steve Haisley and Sgt. Kenneth Blanchette; Arlington Heights police Sgt. Willard Salee, Pat Kennedy, Steve Litzas and Gerald Besenhofer, and two Illinois Bureau of Investigation agents.

Crowd cheers hometown champs

Fremd High School's girls' basketball team, third-place finishers this weekend in the first-ever girls' state tournament, came home to the cheers of about 500 fans at a victory celebration Sunday at the school, 1000 S. Quentin Rd., Palatine.

A caravan of cars followed the team bus through downtown Palatine to the school, where the enthusiastic crowd looked on as the copper-colored trophy, won by Coach Carol Plodzein, below, and her team, was presented with a kiss to principal Thomas Howard.

Girls' team puts Fremd on map

You won't find Fremd, Ill., on a map because the city doesn't exist.

But the girls' basketball team from Fremd, Palatine's "other" high school, just might win Fremd a spot on the map next to Palatine, because the team's third-place finish this weekend in the first girls' tournament is the best any Mid-Suburban League team — male or female — has ever done in state basketball play.

Fremd's consolation win over Centralia Saturday topped the season for the team, which lost only two games in four years. One of the losses was to Sterling in Saturday's semifinal game.

HIGH SCHOOL Dist. 211 and village officials said they "whipped into action" shortly after Fremd's quarterfinal win over Hinsdale South Friday afternoon to plan the victory celebration Sunday at Fremd, 1000 S. Quentin Rd., Palatine.

"We didn't want to plan ahead," Fremd Principal Thomas Howard said, "because we thought we'd be a jinx and then they'd be coming home Friday afternoon."

Nevertheless, a crowd of about 100 met the team bus Sunday as it stopped off at Palatine's Howard Johnson Motor Lodge, Ill. Rte. 53 and Northwest Highway, en route to Fremd. Many fans drove cars decked with green and gold streamers, Fremd's colors, or waved signs reading "Vikings are great" and "Welcome home, superstars."

Even before the team's bus was visible on Northwest Highway, the crowd heard its blaring horn and fans in the motel's parking lot answered with applause, cheers and more honking horns.

A CARAVAN OF about 35 cars followed the bus through central Palatine to the victory celebration at Fremd, as students hung out of car windows, cheering and waving to Palatine residents.

Members of the Fremd band, including one saxophonist perched in a tree near a school entrance, and about 100 fans greeted the parade as it pulled into the Fremd lot, horns blaring.

"We are Vikings, we are great," the crowd chanted.

Two tiny fans clutched a sign reading, "Yeah, Aunt Carol (Plodzein), Best coach and team."

"The Fourth of July parade wasn't that long," a Fremd girl said.

ABOUT 500 FANS sat in bleachers in Fremd's gym, jumping to their feet repeatedly to give standing ovations to the team, the coach, the copper-colored third-place trophy and Village Pres. Wendell Jones' promise that "next year, we're gonna do this all over again and we're gonna be number one."

"Congratulations, lady basketball players. Your community is really proud of you," Jones said. "This is the biggest thing that has happened in Palatine since the Chicago and North Western Railroad."

Coach Carol Plodzein received a standing ovation when Dist. 211 Supt. Richard Kolze praised her "conduct and dignity on the bench. We couldn't have found a better person for this role."

Ms. Plodzein in turn thanked Fremd students, faculty and Booster club members for their support. "Your confidence and cheering is a big part of why we finished third in the state," she said, as team members jumped to their feet to direct a cheer at the audience:

"WE'RE FROM Fremd, couldn't be prouder. Can't hear us now, we'll yell a little louder."

Then, there were handshakes and hugs all around for the team as the crowd engulfed them on the gym floor.

"When I came to Fremd in September, I said I was honored to take over the school with the best student body in the Northwest suburbs," Howard told the audience. "And after this week, I believe it."

Enthusiasm wins over boys at bar

The pling-pling of the pinball machine stopped, pool cues were set aside and all eyes turned to the corner of the darkened room.

The patrons of Erich's Bar, 15 N. Brockway, Palatine, were ready Saturday afternoon to cheer the Fremd High School girls' basketball team to victory, collect a few bets and down a couple of beers.

Shouts of "Hey, those girls are tough" and whoops of joy were heard each time the local players scored.

SOME OF THE men who said they had just stopped in for a drink and didn't plan to watch the game were still in the bar at halftime, won over by the enthusiasm of the crowd.

Bar owner Jack Nickol said some small bets were placed and that, "Naturally they're all for Fremd."

A Rolling Meadows man, who declined to give his name, said his daughters attend Fremd. "I think this is great. Title IX (which banned sexual discrimination in school activities) has really opened up a lot for the girls. I don't think it'll be too long before they're playing hockey or have male coaches."

Some took delight in watching their daughters' friends or neighbor children on television. Roy Saindon of Palatine shouted with joy every time player Kathy Pfander's name was mentioned. "I know her parents," he said, "so I'm rooting for her."

OTHERS, LIKE Ray Regelli of Arlington Heights, began the afternoon saying, "They're not as exciting to watch as the boys," but by the fourth period he was cheering for Fremd and yelling "Get 'em girls, go get 'em!"

At halftime some patrons were so engrossed in talking about the game that Regelli said, "I'd play the jukebox but I think I'd get my arm broken."

As the clock ran down and the score widened in favor of Sterling, some of the men drifted back to the pool table and pinball machine and others left.

But the final score, 69-57 in favor of Sterling, failed to dampen the spirits of most of the fans.

"I still think it's great," Saindon said after the game. "They were right up there with the champs."

Carter energy plan pinches all

WASHINGTON (UPI) — From hints and trial balloons, testimony and tactics, the outlines of President Carter's energy legislation can be seen fairly clearly three weeks before he sends it to Congress.

Carter has said his program will pinch everyone a little, and it may put a dent in his popularity.

White House energy chief James Schlesinger calls it "the moral equivalent of war," and effort requiring united national effort.

SOURCES IN the Capital and energy agencies say the program will include:

- Gasoline. An increase in the federal tax to get people to use less. Carter spokesmen deny he was considering a one-shot increase of 25 cents per gallon, but sources say he may propose 5-cent increases for each of five years, with at least some of the money going to states for energy conservation programs.

- Automobiles. A surcharge on cars that get low gas mileage, perhaps adding up to $500 to the sticker price of the worst gas-guzzlers. Some argue the idea would let the rich choose any car and force the poor into a limited choice.

- Natural gas. An easing of federal price controls on newly discovered natural gas, with some extension of federal controls to gas produced and sold within the same state. Another possibility is a selective pricing system that discourages wasteful use of gas. Carter also is considering a prohibition against use of natural gas where other fuels can be used, such as for industrial and utility steam boilers.

- Oil. Pricing policy about as it is now, with controlled prices that can increase substantially each year and with an end to controls in 1979.

- Coal. A goal of almost doubling production to about one billion tons a year by 1985, coupled with an easier system for forcing utilities and industries to switch from oil and gas to coal. There is authority in present law for required conversions, but they go slowly and that power expires June 30. Carter also may recommend easing clean-air restrictions on use of coal.

- Atomic power. Carter calls nuclear power the lowest priority energy item, but he probably will try to speed up slightly the construction of conventional atomic power plants with improved safeguards. It is believed he

College students show interest in absentee vote

by LUISA GINNETTI

Young voters are taking a special interest in the Palatine village elections this year with requests for absentee ballots coming from college campuses as far away as Annapolis, Md.

Absentee voting always is high in local elections, according to Deputy Village Clerk June Boston, but this year the number of requests for absentee ballots is particularly high from college students.

With three weeks left in the campaign, Mrs. Boston said she has received 15 requests for absentee ballots from students who live away from home.

The requests have come from places such as the University of Illinois, Champaign-Urbana; Purdue University, Lafayette, Ind., and the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md.

"IT SEEMS LIKE the young people are really starting to take more interest in the grass roots politics and this is where grass roots politics starts," Mrs. Boston said. "A few years ago it seems like all the young people were doing was protesting everything but now they seem to be wanting to take part." No exact figures on the number of absentee ballots issued to college students in the last village election were available.

Mrs. Boston said there are about 16,000 registered voters in Palatine and several hundred of these are between the ages of 18 and 21.

She said absentee ballots in a village election usually number about 200 and she said she expects to receive about that number for this election.

Absentee ballots will be available at the village hall, 54 S. Brockway St., through April 18. The village hall will be open April 2 and April 16 from 8:30 a.m. to noon to accept absentee ballots and absentee voting.

MRS. BOSTON said the clerk's office will mail students absentee ballots if their parents call the clerk's office and provide the student's address. Persons with questions about absentee voting should call Mrs. Boston at 358-7500.

Youth activity at the campaign level also is prevalent this year and the children of candidates seem to be spearheading the efforts.

John Matthew, trustee candidate on the Citizens Party of Palatine slate, has three of his six children stumping for votes among young people.

"They're very interested and very active," Matthew said. "They're all out campaigning."

Matthew said his 19-year-old daughter, Sheila, a student at St. Mary's of Notre Dame, has written to her former high school friends on behalf of her father. A daughter at Fremd High School, Mary Ann, also is seeking support for her father among her high

Crowd cheers hometown champs

Fremd High School's girls' basketball team, third-place finishers this weekend in the first-ever girls' state tournament, came home to the cheers of about 500 fans at a victory celebration Sunday at the school, 1000 S. Quentin Rd., Palatine.

A caravan of cars followed the team bus through downtown Palatine to the school, where the enthusiastic crowd looked on as the copper-colored trophy, won by Coach Carol Plodzen, below, and her team, was presented with a kiss to principal Thomas Howard.

Car repairs found costly, varied

Car owners who need auto body repair service face a costly, essentially unregulated industry whose pricing practices can vary by hundreds of dollars for the same work, a Herald study has found.

From dealer-run body shops to independent operations, the costs of labor and parts can vary vastly from shop to shop despite the fact that all use the same manufacturer's pricing and labor time guidelines to make their estimates.

The Herald found a difference of nearly $200 in the estimates quoted to repair a typical "fender-bender" — dented left front fender.

THE DAMAGED vehicle, a 1975 Chevrolet Nova, was taken to 13 are

auto dealerships. Based on their estimates, the study found that:

- The cost to repair the car ranged from $227.92 quoted by one independent body shop to $414.07 quoted by another independent shop, even though all the shops estimated the same amount of time to complete the work.

- Labor costs ranged from $61.20 estimated by an independent shop to $150 by one Chevrolet dealership.

- Parts costs varied from $114.21 quoted by two firms to as high as $229 quoted by two other firms.

- Both the lowest and highest estimates came from independent body shops, while the variation in dealer-quoted estimates varied by more than $100, from $267.27 to $379.62.

- None of the 13 estimates was the same, although two estimates were $2 apart.

- Ten of the 13 shops that receive discounts on parts passed part of the discount along to the customer.

The car had a dented fender, broken headlight frame and a small scratch on the front bumper. It had been damaged while parked on a street, and repairs were to be paid by an insurance company.

All the shops asked what insurance company was involved, presumably because Allstate and State Farm insurance companies use their own adjusters to estimate damage costs.

ALL USED A book that lists General Motors parts costs and the suggested labor repair time to prepare their estimates. The shops listed essentially the same parts needed for the repair, although the two lowest estimates eliminated a costly new bumper from the charges.

THIS DAMAGE will cost from $227 to $414 to repair, depending on which Northwest suburban auto body shop you select. The $200 range in prices among 13 estimates reflected varying labor and parts cost — and the recommendation of some repair shops to replace the car's bumper.

Girl cagers put Fremd on map; fans welcome team

You won't find Fremd, Ill., on a map because the city doesn't exist.

But the girls' basketball team from Fremd, Palatine's "other" high school, just might win Fremd a spot on the map next to Palatine, because the team's third-place finish this weekend in the first girls' tournament is the best any Mid-Suburban League team — male or female — has ever done in state basketball play.

Fremd's consolation win over Centralia Saturday topped the season for the team, which lost only two games in four years. One of the losses was to Sterling in Saturday's semifinal game.

HIGH SCHOOL Dist. 211 and village officials said they "whipped into action" shortly after Fremd's quarter-final win over Hinsdale South Friday afternoon to plan the victory celebration Sunday at Fremd, 1000 S. Quentin Rd., Palatine.

"We didn't want to plan ahead," Fremd Principal Thomas Howard said, "because we thought we'd be a jinx and then they'd be coming home Friday afternoon."

Nevertheless, a crowd of about 100 met the team bus Sunday as it stopped off at Palatine's Howard Johnson Motor Lodge, Ill. Rte. 53 and Northwest Highway, en route to Fremd. Many fans drove cars decked with green and gold streamers, Fremd's colors, or waved signs reading "Vikings are great" and "Welcome home, superstars."

Even before the team's bus was visible on Northwest Highway, the crowd heard its blaring horn and fans in the motel's parking lot answered with applause, cheers and more honking horns.

A CARAVAN OF about 35 cars followed the bus through central Palatine to the victory celebration at Fremd, as students hung out of car windows, cheering and waving to Palatine residents.

Members of the Fremd band, including one saxophonist perched in a tree near a school entrance, and about 100 fans greeted the parade as it pulled into the Fremd lot, horns blaring.

"We are Vikings, we are great," the crowd chanted.

Two tiny fans clutched a sign reading, "Yeah, Aunt Carol (Plodzein), Best coach and team."

"The Fourth of July parade wasn't that long," a Fremd girl said.

ABOUT 500 FANS sat in bleachers in Fremd's gym, jumping to their feet repeatedly to give standing ovations to the team, the coach, the copper-colored third-place trophy and Village Pres. Wendell Jones' promise that "next year, we're gonna do this all over again and we're gonna be number one."

Police bust nets 4, $40,000 in pot

Four persons, two of them from Arlington Heights, were arrested and $40,000 worth of marijuana was confiscated Saturday in the climax of a combined investigation by Buffalo Grove and Arlington Heights police.

The two Arlington Heights men, both 18, were arrested Saturday afternoon in Arlington Heights after they allegedly sold five pounds of marijuana to undercover police agents. The arrests ended a three-week investigation by Buffalo Grove Det.

Robert Quid.

The identities of the Arlington Heights suspects were not released by police pending investigation into the area drug traffic. Both were charged with possession and delivery of marijuana.

Later Saturday, Buffalo Grove and Arlington Heights police, supplied with information by informants, traveled to west suburban Bensenville where they arrested two men and recovered 44 pounds of marijuana valued at $40,000. Bensenville police assisted in the arrests.

JOSE HERNANDEZ, 28, and Teleford Cantv, 24, both of 334 E. Hillside Ct., Bensenville, were taken into custody and charged with possession and sale of marijuana.

A spokesman for Bensenville police said Sunday he did not know if Hernandez and Cantv still were being held in the municipal lockup.

Saturday's arrests were the fourth combined operation of Arlington Heights and Buffalo Grove police which has resulted in a major arrest this year.

March 18 Buffalo Grove and Arlington Heights police arrested Michael F. Johnson, 25, of 400 Touhy Ave., Elk Grove Township and 19-year-old Wayne E. Wadulak, 304 Meier Rd., Mount Prospect. Both were charged with possession and delivery of $1,300 worth of marijuana.

Saturday's initial arrests were made by Buffalo Grove police officers Quid, Gary Del Re, Steve Haisley and Sgt. Kenneth Blanchette; Arlington Heights police Sgt. Willard Salee, Pat Kennedy, Steve Lizas and Gerald Benenhoffer, and two Illinois Bureau of Investigation agents.

Life miserable in leaky condos; owners seek aid

by MARY DIETER

Alberto Tassan has a hole as wide as his double bed in his bedroom wall. Katherine Santoro has water and nail spots on the walls of five rooms. Both live in $43,000 condominium apartments in Village on the Lake, and say they can't get satisfaction from the developer.

And both say they feel unimportant and consequently ignored by the large United Development Co., Chicago.

"IT'S VERY, VERY discouraging," said Mrs. Santoro nearly a year after water spots began forming on her bedroom wall.

"You put up with certain things, but something like this is ridiculous."

Mrs. Santoro, who is divorced, has lived with her four children in a three bedroom condominium apartment for three years.

Since moving in, and after the warranties expired, her dishwasher, refrigerator, garbage disposal and oven have broken. She has resigned herself to the fact there is nothing she can do about them.

But when water spots six inches round and nail spots in rows began to form, that was the last straw.

"THEY ARE THE most unsightly, horrible things you've ever seen," she said. Even worse, she said, is that the spots start to flake in humid weather.

Mrs. Santoro began writing letters to Village on the Lake and United Development in May 1976. To date, she said United has acknowledged only a "single spot in the master bedroom that appeared to be a water mark."

Thomas McDade, United vice president, said water could have penetrated the outside brick walls during unusually severe storms last April and early May.

He also said the inspector noticed a number of nail spots that were "due to the gas pilots (on the stove) being set too high and giving off soot."

Tassan also has water spots in five rooms of his condominium unit. Tell-tale marks in the master bedroom show water may have seeped between the interior wall boards, marking the walls in almost horizontal lines.

HE BECAME DISGUSTED with repeated efforts to get satisfaction. Tassan moved into the condominium unit in August 1974 and reported one spot on his original inspection report.

By August 1975, spots were in three rooms. United responded by applying silicone to the building's exterior penetration.

But Tassan said the spots continued to appear. Last August, representatives from United Development cut a hole about one foot high and four feet wide in the master bedroom wall to check for water penetration.

McDade wrote to Tassan telling him "although there was a sign of past water penetration, there was no recent evidence of moisture."

But Tassan tells it differently. He said the half-inch thick insulation and exterior bricks were wet to the touch.

McDADE INDICATED in his letter to Tassan the wall remained open and to check it in the next major rain storm. And the hole still is there, hidden by a large painting.

"Water can gain entry in a given type of storm anywhere," McDade said. "We've done everything we can do."

"I'm acquainted with one or two persons I'm convinced could not be satisfied if we put the whole building under a glass dome," he said.

McDade said water seepage problems result from failure of the caulking around windows. That is a maintenance, not a construction, problem, he said.

Seepage of water from the balcony above also can cause spots, McDade said, adding he recently sent letters to condominium unit owners suggesting they keep their balcony doors closed.

ANOTHER REASON, he said, is failure in the brick. The silicone treatment should have corrected that, he said.

"If there is reason to believe there is a construction defect, the (homeowners') board can make a case of it," McDade said.

It is doing just that. A lawsuit will be filed soon by building No. 5, the building in which both Mrs. Santoro and Tassan live. They are not alone in their plight.

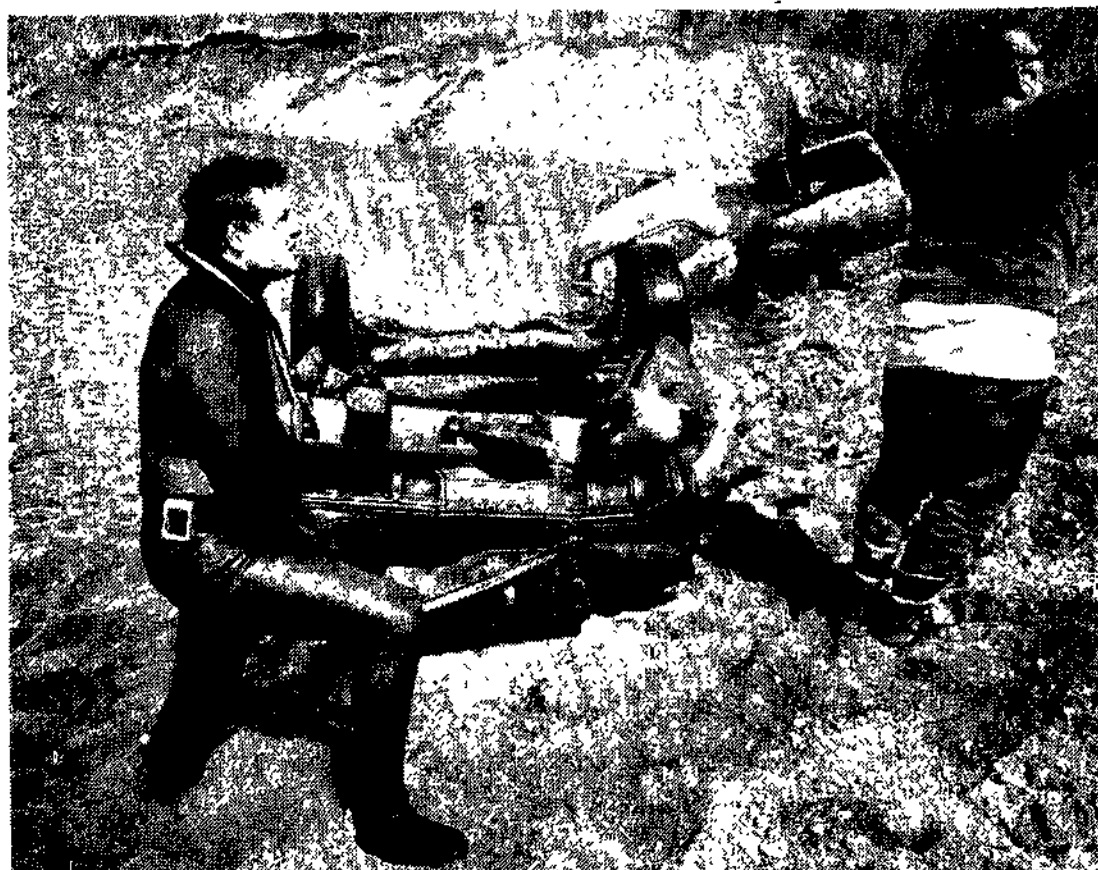

At least 19 other condominium units in the 94-unit building also are affected and more than 60 units throughout the 442-unit complex have problems, said Dennis Cuny, vice president of the Elk Grove Estates Homeowners Assn.

THOMAS RETTENBACHER, Elk Grove Village building commissioner, said the village will pursue the matter if the association provides specific information about the problems.

"You get to a certain point and that's just maintenance of the building," Rettenbacher said. "To our knowledge, there are no construction problems or code violations."

"The main thing is to know exactly why moisture is coming through the walls," he said.

"If the village has any authority in the matter, we certainly, absolutely, would pursue it without hesitation."

New hunt for teen fruitless

Scuba divers from nine area fire departments, about 65 Army Reserve units and investigators from Mount Prospect searched a number of rock quarries located southeast of Elgin Saturday in a massive but futile effort to find the body of missing Mount Prospect teen-ager Barbara Glueckert.

Several cars were towed out of the water and trunks were forced open as investigators followed a hunch that her body possibly had been dumped in the quarry area. Army reserves of the 12th Special Forces, a Green Beret unit in Arlington Heights, searched the land for possible burial sites around the quarries, owned by the Chicago Gravel Co. The all-day search did not result in recovery of the girl's body, which police believe may be buried somewhere near Huntley, Ill.

Teen's traffic death spurs action for 'a place to go'

by ROBERT KYLE

Sometime during the two days that Jeanette Adams lay dying, the conversation among her friends turned to a familiar complaint.

There's no place for kids to go in Schaumburg, said the blue jeans crowd in the hospital waiting room, you can't hang around the pinball arcade after you've run out of quarters, and they kick you out of the shopping center whenever some merchant complaints that you're bad for business.

own hangout.

THAT WAS MARCH 17, a Thursday, the day of the traffic accident on Wise Road west of Cedarcrest Drive. Elaine Osterberg, 18, of Schaumburg was killed, and Miss Adams and Patrice L. Soelter, 18, also of Schaumburg were injured.

By Saturday, all three girls had died.

Within a week, Mike Netti's idea had taken root at Schaumburg High School. More than 1,200 students had signed petitions asking the village for the building. A Jeanette Adams memorial fund had accumulated $700 in "dimes and dollars," and the typing classes were turning out letters to village officials and potential donors of equipment and maintenance money.

And it had found an adult champion in Dennis Hoky, the Schaumburg Police Dept. juvenile officer and Jeanette's foster father since last November.

THE LACK OF gathering places for teen-agers had nothing to do with Jeanette's death, Hoky says. She wasn't cruising aimlessly at the time of the crash but coming home from her job as a telephone solicitor.

But, in a way, her life illustrated the nowhere-to-go blues. Her friends say her home life was not happy, and Hoky says she got into just enough trouble to know him professionally but not enough to become a case in juvenile court.

She changed when she moved in with her new foster parents, her grades improved, she got a job, and she was accepted at Harper College only days before she died.

"A kid needs a place to go where he can get away from adults for a while," Hoky says. "If a kid has a fight with his parents and leaves home mad, he's going to lash out at the first adult who crosses him. If he can get away from the adult world for a while, it gives him time to cool off."

HOKY AND HIS YOUNG lobbyists took their case to a village board committee Tuesday and got a cautious "maybe." The trustees wanted a written proposal and wondered if the students would settle for part of the Great Hall on a trial basis.

"This is the first time we've ever had the young people say 'this is what we want' rather than the older people telling us what the kids want," said Trustee Ray LeBeau.

Encouraged, Hoky and the students said they'll approach another village committee today and the full village board April 12.

"The kids really need someplace of their own," Netti said later. "All they do now is drive around until they run out of money for gas. Then they get bored and throw a rock through somebody's window."

"Kids complain about it all the time, but for some reason everybody really got interested in doing something after Jeanette got killed."

"She was like a sister," Netti said, his voice thickening a little. "She never said too much about her own problems, but she was always listening to everybody else's. I think she would have liked a place like this."

Carter energy plan pinches all

WASHINGTON (UPI) — From hints and trial balloons, testimony and tactics, the outlines of President Carter's energy legislation can be seen fairly clearly three weeks before he sends it to Congress.

Carter has said his program will pinch everyone a little, and it may put a dent in his popularity.

White House energy chief James Schlesinger calls it "the moral equivalent of war," and effort requiring united national effort.

SOURCES IN the Capital and energy agencies say the program will include:

- Gasoline. An increase in the federal tax to get people to use less. Carter spokesmen deny he was considering a one-shot increase of 25 cents per gallon, but sources say he may propose 5-cent increases for each of five years, with at least some of the money going to states for energy conservation programs.

- Automobiles. A surcharge on cars that get low gas mileage, perhaps adding up to $500 to the sticker price of the worst gas-guzzlers. Some argue the idea would let the rich choose any car and force the poor into a limited choice.

- Natural gas. An easing of federal price controls on newly discovered natural gas, with some extension of federal controls to gas produced and sold within the same state. Another possibility is a selective pricing system that discourages wasteful use of gas. Carter also is considering a prohibition against use of natural gas where other fuels can be used, such as for industrial and utility steam boilers.

- Oil. Pricing policy about as it is now, with controlled prices that can increase substantially each year and with an end to controls in 1979.

- Coal. A goal of almost doubling production to about one billion tons a year by 1985, coupled with an easier system for forcing utilities and industries to switch from oil and gas to coal. There is authority in present law for required conversions, but they go slowly and that power expires June 30. Carter also may recommend easing clean-air restrictions on use of coal.

- Atomic power. Carter calls nuclear power the lowest priority energy item, but he probably will try to speed up slightly the construction of conventional atomic power plants with improved safeguards. It is believed he

Ban Hendricks from budget vote: trustees

by MARSHA S. BOSLEY

Trustee Richard N. Hendricks should not vote on the 1977-78 Mount Prospect budget because of his absence from budget hearings, his fellow trustees said Saturday.

Hendricks was criticized by trustees because he has missed all three meetings on the budget. All were Saturday mornings.

Hendricks will have the opportunity to vote on the budget when it is presented for adoption Tuesday night.

"Since when can they take a God-given right away from me," Hendricks said when contacted Saturday after the other trustees completed their preliminary review of the budget. "If it's up for consideration, I will be there. I vote at every board meeting."

THE MEETING begins at 8 p.m. in the public safety building, 112 E. Northwest Hwy.

"I would rather no special attempts be made to get him there," said Trustee Leo Floros after it was suggested Hendricks be advised of Tuesday's meeting. "He would be ill-equipped to vote intelligently. It would be better if he did not participate in the final vote. I would hope he'd consider passing."

Trustee Michael H. Minton, who suggested Hendricks be notified of the board meeting, said Hendricks' vote on the budget might be justified if he listened to tape recordings of the budget talks. Other trustees, however, agreed with Floros, saying Hendricks should be left out of the final budget approval. Floros said time would not allow Hendricks to adequately review transcripts of the budget talks.

Hendricks, who said he was on "personal business" Saturday, contended he did not know there was a budget hearing scheduled.

"He knows," Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley said. "I notified him personally before the last one and he said it's his habit to work Saturdays. It's true there was no written notice. I thought it was a waste of time to tell him this time." Hendricks is a self-employed plastics supplier.

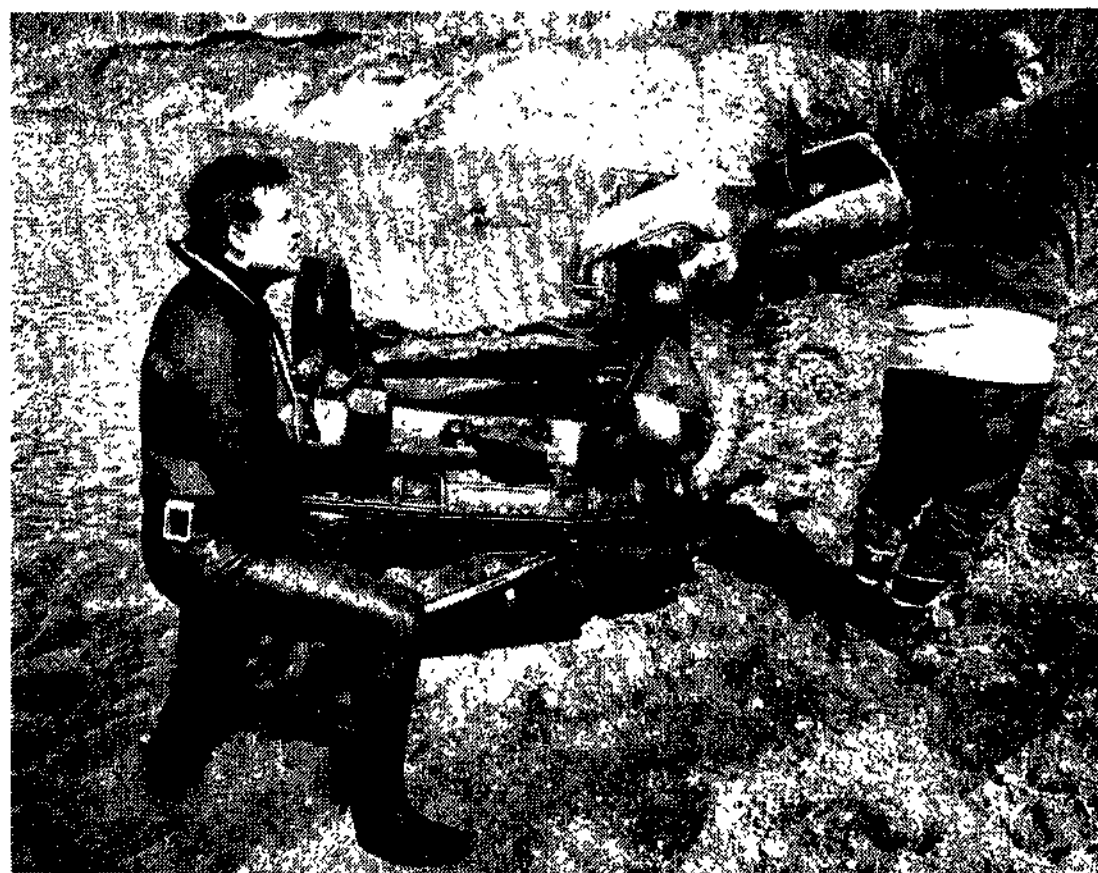

"WE ALL WORK," Floros said. "We're all working here this morning."

New hunt for teen fruitless

Scuba divers from nine area fire departments, about 65 Army Reserve units and investigators from Mount Prospect searched a number of rock quarries located southeast of Elgin Saturday in a massive but futile effort to find the body of missing Mount Prospect teen-ager Barbara Glueckert.

Several cars were towed out of the water and trunks were forced open as investigators followed a hunch that her body possibly had been dumped in the quarry area. Army reserves of the 12th Special Forces, a Green Beret unit in Arlington Heights, searched the land for possible burial sites around the quarries, owned by the Chicago Gravel Co. The all-day search did not result in recovery of the girl's body, which police believe may be buried somewhere near Huntley, Ill.

Car repairs found costly, varied

Car owners who need auto body repair service face a costly, essentially unregulated industry whose pricing practices can vary by hundreds of dollars for the same work, a Herald study has found.

From dealer-run body shops to independent operations, the costs or labor and parts can vary vastly from shop to shop despite the fact that all use the same manufacturer's pricing and labor time guidelines to make their estimates.

The Herald found a difference of nearly $200 in the estimates quoted to repair a typical "fender-bender" — dented left front fender.

THE DAMAGED vehicle, a 1975 Chevrolet Nova, was taken to 13 are

auto dealerships. Based on their estimates, the study found that:

- The cost to repair the car ranged from $227.92 quoted by one independent body shop to $414.07 quoted by another independent shop, even though all the shops estimated the same amount of time to complete the work.

- Labor costs ranged from $61.20 estimated by an independent shop to $150 by one Chevrolet dealership.

- Parts costs varied from $114.21 quoted by two firms to as high as $229 quoted by two other firms.

- Both the lowest and highest estimates came from independent body shops, while the variation in dealer-quoted estimates varied by more than $100, from $267.27 to $379.62.

- None of the 13 estimates was the same, although two estimates were $2 apart.

- Ten of the 13 shops that receive discounts on parts passed part of the discount along to the customer.

The car had a dented fender, broken headlight frame and a small scratch on the front bumper. It had been damaged while parked on a street, and repairs were to be paid by an insurance company.

All the shops asked what insurance company was involved, presumably because Allstate and State Farm insurance companies use their own adjusters to estimate damage costs.

ALL USED A book that lists General Motors parts costs and the suggested labor repair time to prepare their estimates. The shops listed essentially the same parts needed for the repair, although the two lowest estimates eliminated a costly new bumper from the charges.

The bumper had a two-inch scratch, but the majority of the shops said the customer would be justified in in-

THIS DAMAGE will cost from $227 to $414 to repair, depending on which Northwest suburban auto body shop you select. The $200 range in prices among 13 estimates reflected varying labor and parts cost — and the recommendation of some repair shops to replace the car's bumper.

Independent voter group backs Krause for mayor

A group of independent Mount Prospect voters, the Villagers Organized for Independent Election, has endorsed Carolyn H. Krause in the 1977 mayoral race.

The group also backed Leo Floros, Norma J. Murauskis and Ronald P. Cassidy for village trustees.

The endorsements came after each mayoral and trustee candidate was interviewed by a four-member screening committee appointed by the organization.

CANDIDATES NOT ENDORSED are mayoral hopefuls Michael H. Minton and Edward B. Rhea Jr., and trustee candidate E. P. Richardson. All three are village board members.

Rhea was the only candidate who refused to be interviewed. He said the group was determining its endorsements before the interviews.

"That's nonsense," Mrs. Krause said about Rhea's statements. "I remember this group from two years ago and they didn't endorse me (for trustee) then."

Group chairwoman Anita Kuechenberg, 605 Hackberry Ln., said Mrs. Krause's background as an attorney and chairwoman of the Mount Zoning Board of Appeals "has provided unique administrative experience needed to guide the village board."

"HER CONSERVATIVE attitude toward the village budget is refreshing and believable," Mrs. Kuechenberg said. "Her view that the village board should only allot the required amount for the library and submit the excess to the people in the form of a referendum could put an end to the continuing library dilemma."

The group said Mrs. Krause could be singled out as a "capable public servant" rather than a "politician."

Mrs. Krause said she was pleased with the endorsement from "a group of citizens being involved. It all plays a part" in the April 19 election.

The group said it supports Floros for his "good record from his current two-year term as a trustee."

Mrs. Murauskis was endorsed for her interest in village spending and dubbed by the group as the "village conscience." Cassidy's involvement in community affairs won him the backing of the citizens' group.

The organization was formed in 1975 to determine which candidates would be most responsive to Mount Prospect citizens "from the viewpoint of the typical resident," Mrs. Kuechenberg said. "We are just a group of residents, not a party or slate. We have not encouraged or persuaded any individual to seek election to the village board."

Dist. 26 candidates forum today

The River Trails Dist. 26 caucus will sponsor a meet-the-candidates night for Dist. 26 Board of Education hopefuls at 8 p.m. today at River Trails Junior High School, 1000 Wolf Rd., Mount Prospect.

Candidates vying for the 3-year terms are incumbent Richard Foster, 414 Grego Ct., Prospect Heights, and newcomers Richard Carter, 1817 Apache Ln., Mount Prospect, and Michael Freeman, 803 Greenwood, Mount Prospect.

Incumbent Joy Daskal, 1806 Apache Ln., Mount Prospect, is unopposed for the two-year term, and incumbents Sylvia Lurie, 122 Bonnie Brae Ln., Mount Prospect, and Patrick Fauceglia, 1415 Althea Dr., Mount Prospect, are the only candidates for two 1-year terms.

The six candidates will make opening statements and will answer questions from the audience. The presentation will last until 10 p.m.

AFS fund-raiser Saturday

Prospect High School's American Field Service Club will conduct a "Green Eggs and Ham" fund-raising project at 10:30 a.m. Saturday.

Thirty club members, in teams of three each, will knock on doors explaining the organization's need for funds. The resident will be asked for a contribution of an egg and, if so inclined, a donation. Proceeding to the next home, the egg will be offered in exchange for a monetary gift to AFS. This will be repeated over and over in various areas within the high school boundary.

Three AFS students are expected at Prospect next year and the funds will help pay the expenses.

The project's name was explained by club member Allison Welles. "We are collecting eggs and receiving green currency for them. And, we are a bunch of hams working on it."

AN ON-GOING scholarship fund is being established to honor Ethel T. Basnik, an enthusiastic member of the Mount Prospect Nurses Club, who died recently as the result of a malignancy. Ethel helped establish the original Nurses Club Scholarship Fund.

Ethel Basnik, 44, of 902 Golf View Pl., was a Mount Prospect resident for 15 years. She and her husband Gil had four daughters, three now in college and a 10-year-old at Lions Park School.

One of the daughters, a junior in the University of Iowa School of Nursing, recently was awarded the LuAnn Gerlach Scholarship honoring a cancer victim. As a result, Gil was inspired to set up a continuing scholarship fund in memory of his wife, using memorial monies he has received. The nurses club will administer the funds.

Friends and members of the community who would like to contribute to the Ethel T. Basnik Scholarship Fund may do so by sending contributions to the club's president, Ann Cole, 505 Carol Ln., Mount Prospect.

Gil's plan is for the memorial money to be invested so that, hopefully, a $500 award can be made annually from the interest that accrues.

"I would like it if people are reminded and think of Ethel each year when a scholarship is awarded in her name," said Gil.

THE YOUTH of St. Paul Lutheran Church will serve breakfast from 7 to 10:30 a.m. Sunday in Mueller Hall, 18 S. School St. Tickets are $1.75 for adults, $1.25 students; and 75 cents for pre-schoolers. Purchase tickets in advance from Pam Pape, 258-5631. Tickets at door are 25 cents extra.

EASTER BREAKFAST also will be served at St. Mark Lutheran Church, 200 S. Wille St. from 7 to 8:30 a.m., following a sunrise service at 6 a.m. and prior to festival services at 8:30, 9:45 and 11 a.m.

St. Mark services will include a traditional Unveiling of the Cross with crescendo drum roll and trumpets.

Resident speaks up for stringent zone regulations

The first supporter of stringent zoning regulations spoke out Saturday at the fifth and final session of a public hearing on Prospect Heights' proposed zoning laws.

Wayne Mueller of Prospect Heights told the zoning commission, which conducted the hearing, that less stringent regulations would create nuisances.

"I am wholeheartedly in favor of strict regulations regarding home businesses," he said.

MOST OF THE approximately 400 persons who attended the five-session hearing, have called for more relaxed laws governing home businesses, recreational vehicle parking, landscaping and pet regulations.

Mueller said he lived next door to a man in another community who operated a machine shop in his home. The noise could sometimes be heard until late at night, he said.

"All you have to do is encounter this once and it leaves a bad taste in your mouth," he said.

"Most of the comments we've had... have geared themselves to four of five issues," said Frederick Darmstadt, acting commission chairman.

THE COMMISSION now will begin revising the code. It will reconsider its position on the five issues and other regulations, he said, adding commissioners must listen to both sides on every issue.

Although only one supporter of strict zoning regulations appeared at the hearing, Darmstadt said a number contacted him in the nine months since work on the code began.

The proposed home business regulations allow use of 25 per cent of one floor in a home for business purposes. Accessory buildings and garages could not be used. Only mail delivery and passenger vehicles could be used to transport materials to and from the house. Commercial vehicles would be restricted to back and side yards under the code. They would have to be screened with fencing or shrubbery.

THE REGULATIONS on hedges limit those along property lines to six feet.

Critics of the proposed code asked that medium sized commercial vehicles be allowed to be parked in driveways and that use of accessory buildings for home businesses be permitted.

They also have called for elimination of the screening requirement for recreational vehicles, permission to park the vehicles in the driveways and no limit on hedges.

Darmstadt said he would announce the date of the next commission meeting at which revisions of the code will be discussed.

After the revisions, a two-session public hearing will be held. Darmstadt asked that any written comments on the proposed code be delivered to him by Friday to the city hall, 13 Prospect Ct.

Dist. 59 candidates to speak on finances

Candidates for the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 Board of Education will present their views on the district's finances and educational programs at candidates nights Tuesday and Wednesday.

Tuesday's candidates night will be at 7:30 p.m. at Lively Junior High School, 999 Leicester Rd., Elk Grove Village.

Wednesday's candidates night will be at 7:30 p.m. at Dempster Junior High School, 420 W. Dempster, Mount Prospect.

Both programs are sponsored by Dist. 59.

No vote for Hendricks urged

posel reducing the Mount Prospect Public Library budget by 11 per cent was rejected. The tentative vote was 3 to 3. Minton said Hendricks' vote could determine if the library's proposed $505,064 operating budget is reconsidered.

"I very seldom miss committee meetings," Hendricks said. "I never miss board meetings. I'm used to them talking behind my back. Whatever comments those men make it doesn't bother me."

Hendricks has been a trustee since 1973. His current term expires in two years. He, like the six other trustees, receives $1,200 annually as a village board member.
